SENATE KILLS COAL RESOLUTION

FOLLOWING THEIR ARREST in Baltimore, Md., in connection with the death of their six-week-old son, Tony, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Waskis are shown with another son, Joseph, and the arresting officer. Police accused the couple of causing the death of the baby after they allegedly had tried to sell the child for $2,500. The parents are being held without bail pending action by the grand jury.

$428,000 PUT ON DOORSTEP

Big Batch Of Aga Khan's Gems Returned To Police

MARSEILLE, Jan. 27—More than $428,000 worth of the $608,000 in jewels taken from the Aga Khan last Aug. 3 in a tommygun holdup turned up mysteriously today on the doorstep of Marseille police headquarters.

A terse note wrapped with the jewels claimed that the remainder was in the possession of a gang leader originally reported slain along with his mistress during a squabble over division of the loot.

An intercontinental search was launched for the pair, still at large with three other members of the gang. Six persons linked in the crime are already in jail.

Three experts who examined the more than 250 jewels found in the package said none of the restored gems were in their original form, all had been dismantled from their settings—apparently to make disposal easier. They lost considerable value in the process.

INCLUDED in the package found in the police doorway were several of the precious stones taken from the Aga and his wife near Cannes on the French Riviera. But there were none of the original exquisite settings.

The restored jewels included: One 40-carat cut diamond valued at nearly $35,000; one eight-carat rose brilliant; and eight-carat diamond; 13 rose brilliant cut diamonds totalling 114 carats; one lot of diamonds totalling 50 carats, and one lot of "small" stones of four to five carats each.

Police received an anonymous phone call telling them to look in the doorway. There they found the package and a note saying:

"We are returning herewith the greater part of the Begum's jewels. The other part is in possession of Senadji. Leca is innocent."

The Begum is the wife of the Aga Khan, Rita Hayworth's father-in-law. Big Roger Senadji, the gang leader reported slain along with his sweetheart, Renee Remy, Leca, another gang member, is still at large.

$100,000 In Gems Lost To Thugs By Billy Rose

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—Showman Billy Rose and his private mermaid, Eleanor Holm Rose, arrived home from a gay theatrical party at 1:20 a. m. today to find their art-filled Beekman Place town house looted of more than $100,000 in gems.

The high-karat loot was taken by three husky thugs who muscled their way into the lavishly furnished premises at gunpoint, trussed up Rose's butler and locked him in his room while they leisurely looted the premises.

Major portion of the haul was part of Mrs. Rose's fabulous collection of diamonds, which she had left locked in her safe in the dressing room just off her bedroom, whose terrace overlooks the East River.

Ironically, the hit song of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," the musical which occupies the Ziegfeld theatre, owned by Rose, is:

"Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend."

The hefty burglars, who trussed Rose's butler, James McDonald, also made off with about $5,000 worth of Rose's "best friends," men's jewelry. The latter included a platinum and diamond watch and chain, diamond and platinum dress studs and cufflinks, a diamond tie clasp and other expensive masculine baubles.

Recalling that his wife had worn a diamond bracelet, necklace and other pieces valued at $250,000, he remarked:

"Thank God she put on her war paint tonight."

He said most of the loot was insured.

A-BOMB THEORY IS POOH-POOHED

Polar Ice Cap Is Blamed For This Unusual Weather

You can blame—or praise—the polar ice caps for Ohio's more than unusual weather this month.

The mercury's elevator-like actions lately have been very mysterious. Only Wednesday, it zoomed up to a high of 77. Thursday's high, Weatherman John Smith reported, was 53—a substantial drop.

According to the U. S. Weather Bureau, Ohioans have had one of the wettest, warmest and fickle months in history simply because the frigid air mass to the north has acted queerly for the last two years.

According to Mr. Weatherman, the center of the polar front normally pushes its way into the United States near the Minnesota-North Dakota border. This year and last it's been coming in about 500 miles further westward.

SOME PEOPLE have held that the atom bomb explosions have caused the change, but the weatherman pooh-poohs this theory.

"But don't ask me to explain why the center of the polar front has shifted—a lot of research has yet to be done before anyone can give an answer," he said.

But along with the warmer weather has come a deluge of rainfall which has shattered existing records in almost every city of the state. Rivers, normally ice-bound at this time, have overflowed banks and Winter crop roots have pushed their way up toward the surface.

If all the rain which has fallen on the state this month alone were snow instead, a blanket of white ranging in depth from five to eight feet would cover the state.

The weatherman said an inch of rainfall is usually equivalent to about 10 inches of snow in average conditions. On that basis, the nearly 10 inches which fell on Cincinnati so far this month would have piled up nearly 100 inches—more than eight feet—of snow.

Columbus has recorded six inches, Cleveland seven and Lima nearly eight and a half inches. Both Cleveland and Lima broke existing records for rainfall in January as did nearly every other reporting point in the state.

DAILY AVERAGE temperatures have fluctuated greatly, but the average daily temperatures are about 13 degrees above normal for the stage, making this month one of the warmest of all time.

However, a continued period of low temperatures for the remaining days of the month could well lower the monthly average.

The ups-and-downs of the mercury have created a problem for the state's farmers. Wheat and root crops, coaxed to near the surface by the balmy weather, are vulnerable to quick freezes.

Another highlight of unseasonal temperatures is the savings to coal, gas and oil users—savings which have been particularly welcomed by coal users who have not been able to get all the supply they have wanted this year because of the coal strike.

Experts Alerted To Keep Tab On Planet Mars

ALBUQUERQUE, Jan. 27—Astronomers all over the world were asked today to make a special observation of the planet Mars where a "terrific explosion" was reported to have occurred Jan. 16.

The request for close study of the planet came from Walter Haas of Albuquerque, director of the International Association of Lunar and Planetary Observers.

Haas said the explosive evidence was observed by Tsuneo Saeki of Osaka, Japan, director of the Mars section of the Oriental Astronomical Association.

Saeki, observing Mars at approximately 4:30 a. m. (Japanese time), said he noted a peculiar "bulge" at the edge of the planet.

On close inspection, he said the bulge appeared to be a grayish cloud, which he estimated to be 900 miles across and some 60 miles off the surface of the planet.

Haas said the color was especially significant since most clouds observed on Mars are either bluish or yellowish, indicating vapor and dust respectively.

He said the gray color could indicate a volcanic eruption, as such, would be extremely important and interesting.

He said Mars will be observable from the United States about Feb. 3, and on March 23, it will have moved an estimated 40 million miles closer to Earth. It presently is situated in the constellation Virgo about 100 million miles from Earth.

Helmstedt Block Still In Force

BERLIN, Jan. 27—Russia continued its partial blockade of Berlin today despite angry Western demands for "immediate removal" of traffic barriers.

More than 200 Berlin-bound trucks were backed up at the Helmstedt checkpoint leading to Berlin. There was a constant backlog of 100 west-bound trucks.

All other Allied traffic was normal, trains were running on schedule and all border points except Helmstedt were completely open.

Ruby Bracelet Center Of Tale

A suspense-packed mystery story starts in today's issue of The Circleville Herald.

Written by Brett Halliday, the story is titled "Blood on the Stars." Just as colorful as the title implies, the story is about rubies, robberies and murder. It features the adventures of Michael Shayne, famous young detective, who solves the mysterious theft of a star-ruby bracelet and the murder of the girl who wore it.

Prober Asks New Hearing

Chambers Sought For Testimony

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—Rep. Nixon, (R) Calif., asked the House Un-American Activities Committee today to reopen the Whitaker Chambers spy case.

The top-ranking Republican committee member said he would formally ask his group to hold public hearings again now that Alger Hiss has been convicted of perjury, largely on Chambers' evidence.

Nixon told newsmen that the "full story of the Communist conspiracy in the government" in pre-Pearl Harbor days has not yet been brought to light. Nixon, who is seeking election to the U. S. Senate, charged in the House that secret information from a Soviet informer which accused Hiss of being a Soviet "agent" was made "available" to President Truman in November 1945.

Nixon stated that the information was obtained from Igor Gouzenko, Soviet code clerk who "broke" the Canadian spy ring, by an American intelligence agency.

The Californian revealed also that since last December he has had photographic copies of eight pages of documents in the handwriting of former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Harry Dexter White, now deceased.

NIXON SAID these documents, which contained confidential information, was turned over by Chambers to the Justice Department. White was among those named by Chambers as cooperating with the Communist "apparatus," but denied the accusation during an appearance before the committee. He died shortly thereafter from a heart attack.

Nixon urged that the committee summon persons named by Chambers, self-confessed former Soviet espionage agent, but who were not questioned during the previous investigation because of a desire not to interfere with the Hiss trial.

The committee closed its investigation in December 1948 after the former State Department official was named by Chambers as the man who handed him secret documents for transmission to Russia.

Feb. 13 Is Set For Jury Call

Pickaway County grand jury will be called Feb. 13, according to Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff.

Normally called in January, date for calling the first 1950 grand jury was delayed to give attorneys time to work on rural income taxes.

County Prosecutor Guy Cline said approximately 40 cases will be up for consideration by the jury panel.

St. Peter's Bones Found?

LONDON, Jan. 27—A Reuter dispatch from Vatican City reported today that Pope Pius soon will announce that the tomb of St. Peter actually has been found beneath St. Peter's church.

Excavations have been underway for months in the belief that the bones lie in a crypt almost directly beneath the present tomb of St. Peter.

ENTERTAINMENT DIRECTOR for American troops in Munich, Germany, Robert C. Charlebois (seated), is shown with Professor Fritz Wolff of the Munich High School for Music. The latter is one of the authorities to hail the former GI as "the greatest tenor of our times." He was discovered by Wieland Wagner, grandson of the great composer, who said Charlebois "must" sing at Bayreuth Festival next year.

PACT POWERS TO BENEFIT

$900 Million Now Ready For Release For Defense

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—President Truman plans today to issue a proclamation approving the release of $900 million for the integrated defense of Atlantic Pact powers.

Later the United States will sign eight bilateral agreements with as many pact nations, setting down the terms under which they will receive U. S. military equipment to bring their fighting forces to full efficiency.

The nations involved are Britain, France, Italy, Denmark, Belgium, The Netherlands, Luxembourg and Norway.

It is anticipated that these agreements will provide for a small U. S. military mission in each participating nation. Its purpose will be to assemble the new equipment and train the soldiers who will man it in its use and maintenance.

THE PRESIDENTIAL proclamation was made necessary by the law establishing the military assistance program. Congress provided that only $100 million of the $1 billion appropriated could be used before an integrated defense plan for the defense of Western Europe had been approved.

The defense plan was set up at a meeting of the defense committee of the pact powers in Paris last December. The chief executive has been studying the plan since then.

Goods to be furnished the European powers are expected to start moving within a month. The exact nature of the supplies given each country and the amounts will be kept a military secret.

However, France was expected to be the chief recipient because of her exposed position. The French army will not be increased, but the soldiers will be fully equipped with modern weapons and trained in their use.

Emphasis is expected to be placed on heavy tanks, fighter planes, anti-tank guns and bazookas.

Until late yesterday it had been doubtful whether Britain would join in the formal signing of the bilateral agreements. For weeks London has held off agreeing to the terms of the compact largely because clarification of technical details were demanded.

These included such matters as the interpretation of the provision that a recipient country could not transfer U. S. equipment to another country. These details finally were waived and the text agreed on late yesterday.

Bricker Seeks 'Most And Best' In A-Weapons

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—Sen. Bricker, (R) Ohio, returned today to the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee and immediately demanded the "most and the best" atomic weapons for the U. S.

Bricker, a former member, rejoins the committee today as result of the resignation of the Veteran, Sen. Vandenberg, (R) Mich.

Asked if he favors pressing ahead on development of the super-powerful hydrogen bomb, Bricker said:

"We ought to develop every phase of nuclear physics. We should always keep in mind the possibility of adapting atomic energy to civilian needs."

"But as long as it is a weapon we should have the most and the best."

At the same time, Bricker reiterated his opposition to David E. Lilienthal as Atomic Energy Commission chairman and said he stands ready to support Sen. Hickenlooper, (R) Iowa, if the

President To Get No Directive

Lewis Accepts Bid To Renegotiate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—The Senate Labor Committee today killed legislation asking President Truman to act in the coal dispute after John L. Lewis accepted an offer to resume contract talks with Northern-Western operators.

The committee postponed indefinitely further action on a resolution calling on Mr. Truman to use the Taft-Hartley law's 80-day injunction to put the miners back on a full five-day work week. The committee vote was 6 to 5.

Sen. Aiken, (R) Vt., said the postponement was equivalent to killing the proposal.

Sen. Humphrey, (D) Minn., offered the motion to put off action on the measure. He said:

"We have evidence negotiations are under way through collective bargaining to settle the crisis. Any action affirmative or negative by this committee would impair or prejudice the negotiations."

"I FELT WE were doing a disservice to a quick settlement."

Lewis' acceptance of the Northern-Western operators' invitation to renew wage negotiations also may be the signal for 90,000 striking miners to return to work Monday.

The United Mine Workers' president thus far has issued no public orders but it is believed that the word will circulate in the coal fields that all hands should be on the job next week.

Most of the strikers, who have been idle for the last three weeks, are employed by the producers with whom Lewis will renew negotiations next Wednesday in Washington.

If the strikes are ended, President Truman is not expected to intervene in the coal dispute.

The Federal Bureau of Mines reported that coal supplies are at the danger point but officials apparently believe an emergency can be averted if all the 480,000 soft and hard coal diggers work three days a week.

Bituminous coal production remained almost constant last

Real Estate Tax Books To Open Feb. 15

Books for collection of real estate taxes in Pickaway County for the first half of 1949 will be opened Feb. 15, closed March 20, according to Robert Colville, county treasurer.

Colville said tax rates for the county have been approved by the state department of taxation with the exception of the Waterloo school district which overlaps into Fayette County.

He said the Fayette County rates have not been approved yet, and that the Waterloo school district "will be ignored here until such time as we get a rate for it."

The closing date was set for March 20 in order to get the distribution in the hands of school boards before the close of school, the county treasurer explained.

Bradley Urges Free Effort

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 27—General Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said today that American scientists must be allowed to carry their discoveries to ultimate perfection "no matter how fearsome the result may be."

Bradley's statement was taken to mean he fully endorses manufacture of a hydrogen bomb described as 1,000 times more powerful than the World War II A-bomb. President Truman is trying to decide whether such a bomb ought to be made, in the face of some suggestions that an H-bomb would be too "terrible" a weapon.

week, despite further mine shut-downs.

A National Coal Association report, based on incomplete car loading reports from the nation's railroads, today listed production for the week ending Jan. 21 as approximately 7,250,000 tons. Production the week before reached just 7,420,000.

THE ASSOCIATION said production for the corresponding week last year was 11,460,000 net tons.

Production through Jan. 21 of this year was placed at approximately 20,320,000 tons. Production for the similar period of 1949 was 34,895,000.

Lewis accepted an invitation of Northern and Western operators to resume bargaining. The industry representatives set forth a half-dozen conditions that any new agreement must meet.

However, Lewis said the miners are ready "to negotiate in good faith, without stipulation, qualification or commitment."

Negotiations for a new coal wage agreement to replace the pact which expired last June 30 were broken off last October when both the Northern and Southern operators decided that further talks would be futile.

The UMW is demanding a 95-cents-a-day wage increase for the miners and a boost of 15 cents in the operators' present 20 cents a ton contribution to the union welfare program. Major producers have rejected these terms, but Lewis has signed such a contract with a group of independent mine owners producing about 31 million tons of coal annually.

Bricker Seeks 'Most And Best' In A-Weapons

Iowan "has any reason for further inquiry" into how the program has worked.

As an atomic committee senator in the GOP-controlled 80th Congress, Bricker alone voted against confirmation of the appointment of Lillenthal, who has resigned and will leave the AEC chairmanship Feb. 15.

As Bricker regained the committee post, colleagues paid tribute to the work of Vandenberg. One of them declared that time may show that on "three or four occasions the Michigan senator's wisdom may have saved the country."

Vandenberg had an important part in writing the nation's atomic law. He was author of a compromise which satisfied both the strong advocates of "civilian control" and those who believed that the military branch should have a stronger hand in the program.

Pressure Groups Are Listed As Seeking Session

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—Nearly a score of so-called "pressure groups" had to be turned down by Governor Lausche when he decided that a special session of the Ohio Legislature was not necessary to solve the state's fiscal, old age pension and voting problems.

The governor today released a list of 16-count "em"—requests he had received and said they were just "part of the subjects that I was asked to include in the agenda of the legislature in the event it was called into extraordinary session."

The list of other demands released by Lausche included:

Amendment of the law which now prevents councilmen from holding other public office;

Provide funds for the payment of salaries and expenses of the non-moneyless Ohio Turnpike Commission;

Provide more money for local poor relief;

Enact a fair employment practices law;

Enact a uniform municipal code bill;

Increase jobless pay benefits;

Liberalize workmen's compensation payments;

Increase pensions of public workers;

Add two more common pleas judges for Franklin county;

Pay Ralph Eaches of Richmond for the 13 months he served in Ohio Penitentiary for a Marion supermarket robbery he did not commit;

Stiffen the laws against sex crimes;

Tighten the laws against house-breaking;

Restrict the right of the state to collect for the support of patients in mental institutions;

Adopt legislation for the control and prevention of air pollution in city areas;

Permit county election boards to operate mobile registration units.

Troy White Files Petition For Election

Troy W. White of Pickaway Township has filed a petition for nomination as Democratic candidate for county commissioner in the May primary election.

Only other petition filed up to Friday morning was by Lyman Penn, Republican, to succeed himself as county commissioner, according to Pickaway County board of election officials.

Petitions are still being circulated by Fred Tipton seeking nomination as Republican candidate for county auditor, D. A. Yates and Ed Wallace, both seeking the Democratic nomination for representative to the state general assembly.

H. E. Lewis, Republican incumbent, has also taken out a petition for state representative.

Circulating petitions for county commissioner are Harley Mace, Democrat, and Harry E. Montelius, Republican.

Board officials said deadline for filing is next Wednesday.

Lamb Declines Big Election

TOLEDO, Jan. 27—Toledo attorney, television station owner and newspaper publisher Edward Lamb announced today he will not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate in the May primaries.

Lamb stated the press of professional business and affairs led him to reject any possible candidacy. He added that he will support "enthusiastically" whomever becomes the Democratic nominee in the race against Senator Robert A. Taft.

118 Companions To Get X-Rays

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—Nellie is dead, and as a result all 118 of her companions may have to undergo chest x-rays.

Nellie, a six-year-old African green monkey, died yesterday of tuberculosis. Her 118 companions are the other monkeys on display in Columbus Zoo.

Nellie's death was the second in 12 years at the zoo, which has the third lowest contagious disease mortality rate in the United States.

City Council Room Repainted

Mt. Sterling To Get Own Cobbler Shop

Mt. Sterling will have its only shoe repair shop in the near future because of the efforts of four organizations to aid a 27-year-old polio victim.

The victim is Henry Webb, who will begin shoe repair work in the neighboring village as soon as machinery is purchased.

For the last two years, Webb has received shoe repair training through the Goodwill Industries, while Columbus groups have pooled a machine-purchasing fund for the man.

The Mt. Sterling Chamber of Commerce offered Webb an opening in the village, which heretofore has been without a repairman, while the Mt. Sterling Methodist church is completing arrangements for the man's room and board.

Webb's future is planned by a committee including Otis Hockman, president of the Mt. Sterling Chamber and son of Thomas Hockman of Laurelville.

Huge Invasion Said Readied

HONG KONG, Jan. 27—Unofficial reports originating from Canton said today that the Chinese Communist high command plans to use one million men in its all-out invasion of Formosa.

They expressed belief the Communists will throw their newly-trained air force into action to assist in the crossings of Formosa and Hainan Straits.

UAW Joins Blast At Big Steel For Price Hike

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—The CIO Auto Workers Union recommended today that congressional hearings precede any further steel industry price increases.

The suggestion was made by a spokesman for UAW President Walter Reuther at the congressional economic committee's inquiry into the price boost of last December.

Donald Montgomery, Washington representative of the union, said he was not proposing any form of "price regulation," but he recommended that a method be found to conduct congressional hearings on price revisions in a basic industry before they are imposed.

He told newsmen that what he had in mind was a law that would require a price-setting corporation—U. S. Steel in the case of the steel industry—to appear before a congressional committee and discuss its plans before putting a price boost through.

Like the CIO Steelworkers' spokesman, Montgomery attacked steel industry claims that the December price boost was caused by increased costs resulting from pension and insurance programs secured by the employees.

There has been no agreement on the true amount of the boost, with the industry claiming it averaged under four dollars a ton and the unions placing it much higher. It was increased Dec. 16 by U. S. Steel, with the rest of the big producers following suit.

2 Persons Hurt In Crash At Routes 22, 104

Two cars were considerably damaged and two persons slightly injured Thursday in a two-car crash at the intersection of Routes 22 and 104 east of Circleville.

State Highway Patrolman Charles Watters said a car operated by Thomas J. Vernia, 43, of Chillicothe, had been travelling north on Route 104 at the time and had failed to stop for a stop sign at the intersection.

Vernia's auto was smashed in the right front by an auto driven by Charles W. Scott, 19, of Monaca, Pa. Two passengers in the Scott auto received minor bruises.

The Chillicothe driver was haled into Circleville mayor's court, where he was fined $10 and costs for failing to yield the right of way.

Burglar Gets $20 In Home

A sneak thief picked up a $20 bill in a Pinckney street home Thursday before being frightened off.

Henry Mader of 114 Pinckney street told Circleville police that his wife had scared off the thief when she entered the front door of the home at about 7 p. m. Thursday.

Mader said the thief had climbed a grape arbor at the rear of the home, had crawled upon a back porch roof and had broken an upstairs window to gain entrance.

From there, Mader said, the burglar went downstairs, ransacked several drawers, and had found a $20 bill before Mrs. Mader frightened him.

Busy Farmer Is Sent Home

DETROIT, Jan. 27—Unemployment due to the two-day-old United Auto Workers (CIO) strike at Chrysler soared to nearly 117,000 today and threatened an epidemic of joblessness among 6,200 supplier firms.

Neither management nor the union appear willing to give ground in the pension dispute behind the walkout of 89,000 Chrysler employees, but labor conciliators were working cautiously toward reviving negotiations.

GREAT ADVANCES

Great advances have been made during the past 12 years in the treatment of infantile paralysis.

In 1938 when the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis was formed, a physician and a nurse usually comprised the polio care team. Today's team may include as many as 13 professional workers. This expanded care has required the expenditure of millions of dollars through the years. Last year the problem of rising medical costs was more acute than ever before because of the record polio epidemic which swept the land. You can help uphold high standards of care for the victims of this disease by contributing today to the 1950 March of Dimes.

No Railroaders Here To Get Layoff, Belief

Circleville railroaders apparently will remain on the job even though an announcement was made Friday that more than 500 Columbus area railroad workers were furloughed because of the coal shortage.

The layoff was on the Pennsylvania Railroad division and followed an announcement from the company in Philadelphia that 15,000 had been laid off throughout the system.

W. E. Hilyard, Pennsy freight agent in Circleville, said he expects none of the local workmen to be laid off since the local line operates exclusively with diesel engines.

A. V. Osborn, freight agent for the Norfolk and Western Railway here said he has "not heard of any layoffs yet and hope we don't have any."

Meanwhile, Circleville coal yards report their supplies are meagre, one yard reporting it has about five days' supply on hand and another stating it has about two days' supply.

The coal men added that the situation has been about the same all winter, with just a few cars of coal rolling in every now and then.

Neal Estate Set At $16,000

The will of Cynthia Neal, leaving an estimated $16,000 estate, has been admitted to probate in Pickaway County probate court.

The will bequeaths five shares of stock in Scioto Bank of Commercial Point, to be divided equally, and $1,000 each to Frances Dountz and Ruth Leupold, daughters.

Rest of the estate is bequeathed to Watson F. Neal, son. It includes a 118 acre farm in Scioto Township, known as the Eva Deckart farm. The will specifies that the $1,000 bequests to the daughters be charged to the farm.

Judge George D. Young appointed Watson F. Neal executor of the estate.

British Ship Said Attacked

HONG KONG, Jan. 27—Reports reaching Hong Kong today said a Chinese Nationalist gunboat shelled a blockade-running British vessel 17 miles outside of Amoy.

The reports identified the merchantman as the "Cloverlock" and said the attack took place last night while the ship was enroute to Hong Kong. The ship was said to have been hit several times but there were no casualties and the damage was described as not serious.

Two Escapees Found Guilty In Cincy Jail Case

CINCINNATI, Jan. 27—Two escapees were found guilty, a third was declared innocent, and Sheriff Dan Tahan suspended two guards late yesterday in connection with a 10-man break from Hamilton County's "escape proof" jail Jan. 7.

Judge Charles S. Bell is considering the charges against a fourth escapee. The prisoners are to be sentenced later.

Lee W. Robertson, 33, of Columbus, charged with conspiring to escape and with malicious destruction of property, was found guilty about two hours after his case went to the jury at 4:43 p. m.

The jury found Charles Hall, 33, of Cincinnati, innocent on the first count, but guilty on the second. Elmer Teeters, 19, of Cincinnati was found innocent of conspiring to escape from the jail, the only charge on which he was tried.

William Martin, 22, of Cincinnati, was tried on both charges before Judge Bell alone after the cases of the other three men went to the jury.

Meanwhile, Tahan suspended Guards Walter Sommerhalder, 57, and August C. Potts, 58, for negligence and laxness in duty. They are the men who inspected the cell block in which a planned break had been reported. Both were appointed by the sheriff from civil service lists last May.

Lustron Claims It Can Break Even In 1950

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—Carl G. Strandlund, president of Lustron Corp. in Columbus, and his chief executives have predicted the giant prefabricated housing plant can break even or show a profit in 1950—if the federal government puts $5 million more in the kitty.

The predictions came yesterday in a news conference at which Lustron unveiled six new home models—one of them a lower-priced two-bedroom house selling for $6,900.

The new cut-price "Newport" model has conventional heating but lacks some of the built-in features of the higher priced types Lustron has found some difficulty in selling.

General Sales Manager W. A. Mathewson predicted the firm will sell 8,000 houses this year—enough to break even.

Strandlund said he has $300,000 of his own money invested in the business and other private capital comes to nearly $20 million.

The Reconstruction Finance Corp. has threatened to foreclose on the $37.5 million it has loaned to Lustron.

Passing Bus Costs Man $25

EXTENSION WORK DETAILED

Agricultural Television Programs Being Prepared

A series of shows devoted to agricultural subjects is to start this month on Columbus television stations.

C. M. Ferguson, director of the Ohio Agricultural Extension Service, told Circleville Rotary Club Thursday the series will consist of one show per month.

The director said two experimental shows have been aired so far. They will become a regular feature starting this month, he said, adding that Ohio is pioneering in this field.

"Since most of the television sets are owned by urban families, the shows will deal with subjects of primary interest to consumers," he explained.

Director Ferguson traced for Rotarians, each of whom had a farmer guest, the history of extension service from its start as a service to bring facts learned in agricultural experiment stations of land grant colleges to the farmers.

THE EFFECT has been to extend colleges into rural areas, he asserted, adding that Ohio State university is not restricted to Columbus, but reaches down to Pickaway County through the extension service.

He pointed out that 21 percent of finances to support extension work is furnished by appropriations by county commissioners, 23 percent from state legislatures and 56 from Congress. The money supplied by county commissioners is spent only in the county where the appropriation originated.

Extension work, said Ferguson, is primarily an educational program. He drew a distinction between education and schooling, however, pointing out that schooling is no more than the running start a person gets for the education he is expected to pick up throughout the rest of his life.

Declaring that education can be bad as well as good, Ferguson said extension programs are aimed to educate in a constructive direction. It deals with the things people know, their skills and their changes in attitude or thinking, he explained.

The work reaches from nutrition of rural families to the clothing they wear. Its effect is even more far reaching than appears on the surface, because "few urban centers populate themselves. They depend on the rural supply."

FERGUSON SAID that while it is not the job of extension service workers to shape public policy, it is their job to get the facts and give them to the people so that they can develop their own public policy.

The extension director dwelt briefly on the work the service performs with 4H clubs. Youngsters in 4H club work, he said, learn to "win without bragging, and to lose without squealing."

He paid homage to the parents of youngsters engaged in 4H club work, describing them as the best type of teachers. He declared 4H club work to be "one of the finest things done by the extension service."

Yank Warships Probe Thefts

TOKYO, Jan. 27—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's chief of operations announced today American warships have been ordered to investigate reports that unidentified vessels have been molesting Japanese fishing boats off South Korea's Cheju Island.

The officer, Brig. Gen. E. K. Wright, said the order was issued yesterday.

Meanwhile, Japan's transportation minister, Shinzo Oya, reported that the Koreans seized four more Japanese fishing boats Wednesday and yesterday. He said 66 Japanese crewmen from five boats seized off Cheju island Jan. 9 through the 12th have returned to Japan from Korea without their vessels.

Witnesses Fail To Agree On Girl's Calmness

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 27 —Prosecution witnesses agree today that Carol Ann Paignt's cancer-stricken father was in "terrible agony" before she shot him.

But the seven witnesses who have appeared before a jury of parents in the Bridgeport "mercy killing" trial disagreed on whether the statuesque 21-year-old blonde was "cool and collected," or "strange" when she killed him.

Nurse's Aide Rose Telesco, asserted the girl had a "strange, vacant expression" when she heard her father, Sgt. Carl W. Paignt, 52, pleading for something to stop his agonizing pain. Five other witnesses said she was "cool" and "calm."

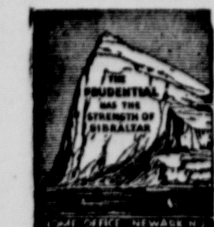

Stamford Police Sergeant John J. McInerney, who questioned her immediately after the shooting in Stamford hospital Sept. 26, said she admitted firing a "practice" shot so she would "know what I was doing."

Farms Put Less Grain To Loan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 — The Agriculture Department reports that farmers put more than 534 million bushels of 1949 grain and oilseed crops under government loans and in purchase agreements.

That marked an eight million bushel drop from a similar period of 1948 when 542 million bushels were under the support program.

As of Dec. 31 there were under loans and agreements 313 million bushels of wheat, 104 million bushels of corn, 40 million bushels of grain sorghums, 31 million bushels of oats, and 28 million bushels of barley plus smaller quantities of rye, flaxseed and soybeans.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

Next time you meet a fellow who doesn't believe in anything he can't measure with a slide rule, ask him to give you a logical explanation of the documented case history of Patience Worth.

On a July evening in 1913, two St. Louis housewives, a Mrs. John Curran and a Mrs. Emily Hutchings, were amusing themselves with an ouija board — a parlor pastime as popular then as Canasta is now. Suddenly Mrs. Curran felt a strong pressure on her hands and the point-er began to spell out a message: "Many moons ago I lived. Again I come. Patience Worth my name."

When the skeptical housewife asked to know more about the lady at the other end of the line, the board immediately answered that Patience Worth had been born in Dorsetshire, England, in 1694, and had always wanted to be a writer.

So began the strangest literary collaboration in the history of psychic phenomena, and during the next 15 years, with Mrs. Curran acting as medium, Patience Worth turned out four full-length novels and almost 2,500 poems—3,000,000 words in all. The first novel, "A Sorry Tale," was published by the reputable and unsensationally-minded firm of Henry Holt and Co., and when The New York Times reviewed it on July 8, 1917, it said:

"This long and intricate tale of Jewish and Roman life during the time of Christ is constructed with the precision and accuracy of a master hand. It is a wonderful, a beautiful and a noble book."

THE SECOND NOVEL, "Hope Trueblood," was the story of a peasant girl in 17th Century England, and it was extolled by a London reviewer as "a landmark of fiction." And in "Braithwaite's Anthology of Poetry for 1917," there were three poems by Vachel Lindsay, three by Amy Lowell, one by Edgar Lee Masters, and five by Patience Worth.

The easy explanation for this phenomenon, of course, is that the St. Louis housewife was a talented writer who had invented the story of Patience Worth to get herself a little publicity. But before you make up your mind, consider the following:

At the beginning, Mrs. Curran got her messages via the ouija board a letter at a time, but halfway through the first book, she began to "see" whole words and sentences, and from then on she dictated to her husband at the rate of 110 words per minute. And hardly a dozen of the 3,000,000 words were of a vintage later than the 17th Century.

A great deal of her writing was done in the presence of reliable witnesses and investigators, and etymologists who examined her prose and poetry testified that it was impossible, without years of study and training, for a person to compose as much as a short story in 17th Century English.

Moreover, they unanimously agreed that the middle-class housewife who had never gone to high school and never been out of Missouri was the last person in St. Louis to write a 70,000-word narrative in iambic blank verse in 70 hours.

Many other oddish facts about this medium confused the psychologists and non-believers who came to investigate. Mrs. Curran often worked on three or four stories simultaneously, and would skip from one to the other in the course of a sitting without losing track of the narratives. And once, when her husband mislaid an early chapter of "A Sorry Tale," Patience Worth obligingly dictated it all over again.

IN ST. LOUIS in 1920, before an audience of writers, scientists and civic leaders at the Artists' Guild, Patience Worth was asked through Mrs. Curran to make up a 25-line poem, each line beginning with a different letter of the alphabet—which she did without faltering, going from "a" to "z" and leaving out the letter "x" as per instruction.

Who was Patience Worth? Well, various researchers went into this carefully and reported that a girl by that name was born in 1694 in Dorsetshire County, England; that some 30 years later she migrated to America, and was killed during an Indian attack in King Philip's War. And that many of the architectural landmarks referred to in her novels are still standing in Dorsetshire, and local records indicate that others had existed around 1694.

Patience Worth stopped communicating with Mrs. Curran in 1923, and Mrs. Curran died nine years later, but to this day nobody has been able to successfully ridicule this greatest-of-all literary riddles. Many psychologists agree with Dr. Walter Franklin Prince of the Boston Society for Psychic Research who, after spending considerable time on the case, said, "Either our concept of what we call the subconscious must be radically altered so as to include potencies of which we hitherto have had no knowledge, or else come cause operating through, but not originating in, the subconscious of Mrs. Curran must be acknowledged."

GLAMOROUS DAYS

THERE is, or was, magic in the name of Day. For a number of years almost anyone of that name could be easily elected to office in a statewide race in Ohio, and even more certainly in a local contest in Cleveland. There were nearly always several judges named Day on the Cleveland bench. The extreme example of the popularity of this name was seen a few years ago when the friends of a telephone lineman named Frank S. Day told him, "With a name like that you ought to be in politics." (Not only was the name Day popular, but another Frank S. Day was already serving on the common pleas court). The lineman adopted the suggestion, ran for the state senate and served several terms there, incidentally without showing much greater qualification for the post than his name.

The drawing power of this name goes back to William R. Day, President McKinley's secretary of state and for twenty years justice of the United States Supreme Court. He was an Ohio man, whose appeal was naturally strongest to Ohioans. It extended outside the state, however, as shown by the career of his son, Stephen A. Day of Illinois, who has just died. He found the name helpful in twice getting elected to Congress, though he was defeated on his third try in 1944.

Will there be other Days in politics? Rufus S. Day, Jr., a nephew of William R. Day, has just been chosen to head a policy-forming group of Cleveland Republicans. This could be the beginning of a striking political career.

DEFYING STALIN

IT WAS foreshadowed, and now it has come. Stalin has formally been declared a god. This was not by the Russians, it is true, though that may come at any time, but by the subservient Albanian People's Assembly. The report transmitted by the Albanian Telegraph Agency is that the Assembly has voted to erect a statue of "the deity, Joseph Vissarionovich Stalin."

Doubtless Albania's precarious situation has much to do with this extreme of sycophancy. Threatened by Yugoslavia and Greece, and handicapped by a feeble government which can barely maintain internal order, Albania can look for aid only to fellow-Communist Russia. Hence there is this type hyper-adulation, which portrays Stalin as not human but divine.

Stalin, of course, has invited such outbursts. This taste for flattery, no matter how excessive, is at curious variance with the commonly accepted picture of him as a ruthless tyrant who has his feet firmly on the ground. Evidently Stalin has a weak spot in this relish for praise. A ruler of ordinarily good sense would have stopped this nonsense long ago.

These Days

The assumption is, in a country like ours, that anyone has a right to an opinion. The fallacy, of course, is that an opinion without facts is not an opinion at all; it might be gossip or hearsay or happy talk.

So, in all the discussion concerning the prospective wars, too many facts are missing to make an opinion worth its expression. For instance, such dates as 1952 or 1954 are offered. The premise for either date is based on the assumption that in some such year, Soviet Russia will be ready for the calculated risk of a conflict.

One of the factors for these assumptions is that the Russians and their satellites produce about 23 million tons of steel; that the United States can produce 90 million tons and our allies about 30 million tons.

The ratio is important only if the war is of the type that involves huge quantities of steel. If, on the other hand, we approach a total revolution in warfare, steel may not be so crucial.

For instance, polar warfare, involving airplanes and atomic, hydrogen and other bombs, is premised on the risk that a swift knockout blow is possible. Such a knockout in the United States would involve Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Chicago and the Ohio Valley from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati. Such a blow would destroy our steel and automotive industries and would stop railroad movements.

As for steel, practically all that would be left would be comparatively small plants in Birmingham, Alabama and on the Pacific Coast. No automobile plants of any importance would continue to function. As for railroads, only the southern and western lines would be available for limited service.

There are those who ask: "What would we be doing in the meantime?" That is not a smart question, because in knockout warfare, there are no two chances: The one who gets the knockout in first, has destroyed his enemy's capacity to resist. In an integrated country such as ours, with industry highly centralized about large cities of dense population, dependent upon external food and water supply, a knockout blow is possible.

The question then arises whether polar war is possible. On that subject, I can have no opinion nor can many persons have one. It involves highly technical knowledge of technical subjects. Our Airforce technicians believe that polar warfare is not only possible but likely. The layman may live to know which expert was right, but it may also be too late by that time.

So, we must first decide whether we are in danger of a knockout and whether we must not act before we get such a blow. It would help if we did know precisely what Stalin and his associates are thinking. Then we could formulate a policy more competently.

FEWER HIGHWAY DEATHS

CHEERING and at the same time surprising news comes out of a meeting of President Truman's Highway Safety Conference. Delegates report that in the last three years a nationwide effort has reduced the rate of traffic deaths by 41 percent. This year's death rate, 7.1 for each 100,000,000 miles traveled, is said to be the lowest in motoring history. The lives saved by the reduction are estimated at 16,000.

On the other hand the total annual death toll reflects no such reduction. Obviously much remains to be done. Roads, cars and drivers all need improvement. Of these three the drivers are probably the most important, for they can make up for most of the defects in the other two.

New Drug Proves Helpful In Fighting Stubborn Infection

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

IN the past, infections of the urinary tract, particularly with germs in the group known as bacillus coli, have proved difficult to control. But, fortunately, today, it would seem that we have a valuable weapon against such stubborn infections of the kidney and bladder in the new antibiotic, aureomycin. Where all other measures fail, aureomycin is frequently highly successful.

Often, these urinary tract infections are associated with long-standing infections of the prostate gland, or infections elsewhere in the body.

Focal Infections

While the aureomycin cannot be expected to eliminate these focal infections, it does seem to bring dramatic relief from the bladder symptoms, that is, painful or frequent emptying of the bladder. It has also been suggested that the aureomycin be given for a few days before and for a week after operation on the prostate gland, in order to control the bladder infection which frequently follows these operations.

The treatment was carried out on ten patients and good results were obtained in all of these.

Aureomycin is easily administered. It is taken by mouth. No upset stomach occurred as a result of the use of the drug as now made. In one patient, a skin rash developed which promptly disappeared when the treatment was stopped.

When treatment is discontinued, reinfection sometimes occurs, particularly if the original source of the infection has not been cleared up. In such cases, a second course of treatment may be necessary. It is possible that the continued use of the preparation in reduced dosages may keep such infections from recurring.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Mother: My daughter is nineteen years of age. She has lots of belching and pains in the stomach and vomiting. What would you suggest?

Answer: There are many possible causes for a condition of this type, such as disorders affecting the stomach, bowel, gallbladder, or liver.

A thorough study is needed, including X-rays of the stomach, bowel, and gallbladder. Until the cause is found, proper treatment could not be advised.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The Navy is getting interested in the Brinks bandits. They figure fellows who could lift a million dollars might know how to lift a battleship.

Don't think those bandits won't be caught. If the FBI doesn't have them all by the end of February, the Treasury will catch them by March 15.

Boston has taken the bandit wave very calmly but the Lowells and the Cabots are traveling in pairs for the time being.

A few Union Club members have protested the robbery there. They still can't see how bandits would have the effrontery to enter the club without having gone before the admissions committee with two sponsors.

One of the members said: "Obviously these men were not true Bostonians or they would know our rules."

We hear the Union League in New York is taking steps to prevent a similar occurrence. Until further notice, visitors unknown to the doorman must be accompanied by the board of Chase National Bank.

CHAPTER ONE

CELIA DUSTIN sat before the mirrored dressing table in an elaborate corner suite on the sixth floor of the Sunlux Hotel in Miami Beach. Subconsciously she counted the strokes as the silver-mounted brush swept through her long flaxen hair... eight, nine, ten... then changed it to her left hand and began counting toward the required hundred strokes. Her sheer dressing gown fell away from her shoulders, revealing the light sun-tan on her smooth throat and chest. Long dark lashes were closed over her blue eyes that shone with an inner delight, and her full red mouth was lifted at the corners in a smile.

Celia was scarcely aware of her reflection. Her head was tilted, and she listened to the muffled sounds in the bathroom where her husband was taking a bath. They had been married two years today, and she knew exactly the progress he was making by the sounds. He was turning on the cold water now, swearing softly and contentedly as he made it colder and colder. In a moment Mark Dustin would fling back the curtain and emerge from the shower, dripping and spluttering like a half-drowned bear.

An indefinite shiver of pure delight traversed Celia's slender body as she transferred the brush from left to right hand for another ten strokes. Marriage was the most wonderful thing in the world. Marriage with Mark, she amended hastily to herself. She had often wondered during the past two years whether it would have been quite the same with any other man. She didn't think so. Mark wasn't anything wonderful. She often told herself that in order to keep her feet firmly on the ground, but he was right for her. She was serenely certain that of all the people in the world she and Mark were meant for each other.

She completed the hundred strokes and laid the hair brush on the dressing table. All sound from the bathroom had ceased. Soon Mark would come out with his black silk robe carelessly belted around his lean stomach, his strong sun-bronzed face glowing with health and with happiness. He would come up behind her chair and lay his cheek against her lustrous hair and smile at her reflection in the mirror, tell her she was the most beautiful girl in the world.

She would blush, as she always did. His lips would nibble at the lobe of her ear and he'd whisper that she was his doll, his baby girl, and then the lovely Miami morning would be perfect indeed.

Sunlight came through the east window and touched her head and shoulders caressingly. From far below there came the faint sound of the surf and the laughing voices of early bathers. It was one of those perfect days in December when the season is just beginning.

Celia did not move a muscle when she heard her husband come padding into the bedroom in cork-soled sandals. She watched her reflection in the mirror and saw him come up behind her and stop there as she had known he would. His black hair was tousled and he looked ten years younger than the forty he had admitted to when they were married. An unruly curl on either side of the part stood up, adding an impish look that matched the gleam in his gray eyes.

He was wonderful, she thought again, knowing him to be even older than forty from stories he had told and hints he'd let drop about adventuring in far places before they met. He was the type who would never grow old, never lose the exuberance of youth.

Something of her love and wonder and pride in him must have showed in her eyes as they met his in the glass, for Mark laughed, his hands on her shoulders, and said, "You look like a little girl on Christmas morning, Mark."

His fingers tightened and his head bent low until his cheek was against her hair. Her eyes still held his in the mirror and a tremor went over her as he kissed her.

He said, gently, "You're the most beautiful girl in the world." Celia smiled happily and demanded, "You do love me, don't you?"

With his lips against her ear, he whispered, "Why else do you think I married you? You are such a paragon in public," he added. She straightened up then, and

She would blush, as she always did. His lips would nibble at the lobe of her ear and he'd whisper that she was his doll, his baby girl, and then the lovely Miami morning would be perfect indeed.

Sunlight came through the east window and touched her head and shoulders caressingly. From far below there came the faint sound of the surf and the laughing voices of early bathers. It was one of those perfect days in December when the season is just beginning.

Celia did not move a muscle when she heard her husband come padding into the bedroom in cork-soled sandals. She watched her reflection in the mirror and saw him come up behind her and stop there as she had known he would.

Battle Over Rent Control
May Be Spectacular Fight

Extension of Draft Faces
Rough Going in Congress

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—It's a tossup whether Congress will extend federal rent controls for another year and indications are that there will be a full-fledged battle on Capitol Hill over the question. President Truman strongly favors continuing the rent curbs after their expiration on June 30, but there is a lot of sentiment in Congress to let them die.

Even some strong administration supporters privately say that they see no need to extend rent ceilings and the problem of holding down rents should be left up to local governments—not Washington.

The argument advanced by opponents of the rent law is that curbs are not needed on a nationwide basis although they may be desired in some localities. Therefore, they say, it is up to local officials.

On the other hand, the administration does not believe that the demand for rent housing has been met sufficiently, and the problem should not be tossed into the lap of pressure-ridden local authorities.

The battle over rent controls may easily turn out to be the most spectacular fight of this session of Congress. In fact, some legislators say consideration of the question may tie up Congress and prolong its present session.

● TO DRAFT OR NOT TO DRAFT?—Rough weather is in store for President Truman's forthcoming request for a continuation of the draft. It took months of fierce oratory for the administration to get the draft re-imposed for 1948.

Then, Congress continued Selective Service for a two-year period, but only after considerable whittling of the administration's bill. Now Defense Secretary Louis Johnson wants a three-year extension, something he appears certain to be refused.

So far, Senator Harry P. Cain (R), Washington, is the only national lawmaker to speak out for the draft. Cain, a World War II veteran,

Hoover Report, Traffic Safety Aired In Parley Of Circleville BPW Club

Henry Reid Jr.
Is Speaker

Circleville Business and Professional Women's Club heard Henry Reid Jr. of the Junior Chamber of Commerce speak on the "Hoover Commission" at the meeting held Thursday night in the club rooms of Masonic Temple. After Reid explained the work of the commission, a round-table discussion followed.

Club members received invitations to attend Founders Day meeting in Logan Feb. 12 and regional meeting in Cincinnati Feb. 18-19. Judge Florence Allen is scheduled to be guest speaker at the Cincinnati meeting.

Feb. 7 is the date set for BPW hospital work. Members will meet in club rooms to fold gauze.

Mrs. George Barnes gave a paper written by Miss Elma Raines who was unable to attend the meeting. Miss Raines stressed the fact in her paper, "How to Promote Traffic Safety," that good drivers are trained, not born. "Traffic problems are everybody's problems," she stated. 1949 brought with it a total of 176 accidents in the vicinity of Circleville. Miss Raines deplored the fact that teenagers so often play when they are driving. She stated that Circleville double and triple parking near school houses at the noon hour is a great hazard to safety. She warned that passengers often distract drivers thereby causing traffic accidents.

Miss Raines stated that a state patrolman blames a large number of accidents on the fast rate of speed.

The BPW club is planning a guest night for the next meeting. Miss Anne Gordon, membership chairman, will be in charge of arrangements.

Extensioneers Hear Agent In Spirited Parley

Forty-three Pickaway County Extensioneers were present to hear Larry Best, county agent, talk on "Pickaway County Youth Faces Tomorrow" recently in Wayne Township school building.

Pickaway County Extensioneers is a rural youth organization for the age group of 15 to 21. Following the county agent's address, five small groupings were formed as discussion units. Four subjects which caused spirited argument were Should all Pickaway County youths plan on college? Do the brightest boys and girls leave the rural community? Is picking a mate who likes your job as important as liking the job yourself? Do public schools have more influence on the morals of young people than churches?

Folk and square dancing concluded the evening program. Refreshments were served. Next meeting is scheduled for Feb. 18 in Wayne Township school.

GREAT TRIBUTE IS PAID

British Friendship Stays Despite Indian Republic

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The amazing vitality of the British crown against the backdrop of a world in transition played a major and historic part when India ceased to be a dominion and was proclaimed civilization's newest republic.

For with no urging from Whitehall and without fear of reprisals if it was not done, the Republic of India decided to remain inside the British commonwealth of nations.

Few greater attributes could be paid to the dignity with which King George has fulfilled his high office while other monarchies have fallen into disrepute and his own political parties at home are engaged in the most bitter struggle in decades.

Prestige and a fear of aggressive Communism probably were responsible jointly for this unique decision.

DESPITE ITS recognition of Communist China, the British government is pledged with the United States to halt further Red advances in Asia.

The leaders of India, knowing that their country is separated from the Red tide only by the plateau of Tibet and the Himalaya Mountains—no bulwarks to propaganda or political infiltration—deemed it wise to stay within the orbit of imperial strength.

India, with its huge population and long coastline, must occupy a key position in any British strategy.

Had the Indian republic chosen to cut itself absolutely loose from all ties with the commonwealth, London's position with regard to its own survival would be far more critical.

Certainly the Indians had ev-

Protestant Group Set To Vote On FEPC Resolution

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27 — Representatives of some 25 million Protestants will vote today on whether they should ask House Speaker Rayburn for favorable action on the bill to create a fair employment practices commission.

A resolution seeking the action was recommended yesterday by the human rights seminar of the National Home Missions Congress, scheduled to conclude its four-day convention here today.

The resolution, as passed by the seminar, stated:

"Recognizing injustices and hardships suffered by segments of the population because of discrimination in employment practices, we recommend the Congress of the United States adopt the fair employment practices bill now in the House of Representatives."

An amendment tacked on the resolution calls for each member of the Home Missions Congress to write immediately to Speaker Rayburn urging his favorable action.

The congress also will study a plan for carrying religion into homes of low income workers who seldom go to church. The plan calls for training of a special corps of ministers and a drive to inform Protestant laymen of basic problems of low income groups.

Marriage Ban Ruling Working

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 27 — If Kentucky's newly installed three-day waiting period on the issuance of marriage licenses was intended to cut down the number of weddings, it has proved successful.

According to a state survey on the effects of the waiting period, in effect since Jan. 1, the marriage license business has suffered a terrific slump.

According to the survey, marriages have been cut in half virtually throughout the state, not only near any state boundary where out-of-staters in the past had been prone to secure "quickie" ceremonies.

New Corn Hybrids Are Detailed

Thomas Says Borers To Stand No Chance

Corn borers will meet their match in four new, rugged hybrid corns available for 1950 planting in Ohio.

These four new hybrids, Ohio K62, Ohio W64, Ohio C54 and Ohio L41, were described by Merle Thomas, associate Pickaway County agent, as "outstanding in stalk and shank quality. Ear dropping because of shank breakage and broken stalks can be practically eliminated by growing these new hybrids."

Harvesting losses caused by corn borer damage, stalk rot or weak shanks were less with these four hybrids than with any other hybrids of comparable maturity, he said.

All of these new hybrids were developed under the supervision of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station and U. S. Department of Agriculture, and the hybrids have been certified by the Ohio Seed Improvement Association, Thomas said.

Commenting on the corn borer damage experienced by Iowa farmers in 1949, Thomas said, "We hope Pickaway County farmers will never be required to pick up a fourth to a half of their crop because wind shakes the borer-damaged ears from the plants."

WITH THESE new hybrids, or some of the previously certified borer-resistant strains, he believed there should be no complaints about ear dropping even under severe borer infestation.

K62 and W64 are well adapted to the northern half of Ohio, he said, while C54 is suitable for both north and central Ohio. L41 is adapted as a full-season corn for the southern part of the state. In addition to being borer-resistant, K62, W64 and C54 are resistant to aphids and leaf blights, while L41 has only average resistance to leaf blight but is extremely resistant to aphid infestation.

Man Admits Assault Cases

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27.—Nineteen-year-old Jeremiah Reed of Columbus today faces trial on 10 counts of assault and robbery.

Reed, caught in a police "decoy" trap Wednesday, was identified in a police lineup yesterday as the man who assaulted five Columbus women in the last month. He later admitted to police his participation in all five of the cases.

Detectives said he would be charged on five counts of unarmed robbery and five counts of assault. Reed was captured by police when he attempted to enter the automobile of the "decoy." Policewoman Jean Miller.

Fugitive Held In Auto Theft

CLEVELAND, Jan. 27.—Charles F. Gopshes, 25-year-old fugitive from the Grafton prison farm, is being held here today on federal charges.

Gopshes, who was charged yesterday by the FBI with the interstate theft of a 1950 car from a Berea sales lot last month, was serving a 10-to-25-year term for armed robbery when he escaped.

According to Ray J. Abbatichio Jr., special agent in charge of the FBI, Gopshes drove the stolen car to New Mexico.

Gospel Is for All Men, Saith the Lord

ALL NATIONS TO BE CONVERTED BY APOSTLES

Scripture—Acts 8:4-11:18.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
BEFORE JESUS' Ascension, He told His apostles to "make disciples of all the nations." This was a new idea to the Jews, who had accepted the Gospel of Christ for their exclusive own. It took some time and several object lessons to convince them that the Gospel was for all men everywhere.

In the modern world, missionaries journey far over the whole earth to bring this message to the people of far-off lands. Millions thus hear the word of God and become Christians.

The lesson today is long and can only be touched upon here, so full is it of episodes and action. In the first place, we are told of Saul, a determined persecutor of the converts to this new religion.

Saul went to the high priest and asked for papers to the synagogues at Damascus, so that he would have authority to seize any Christians he might find there and bring them captive to Jerusalem.

On the way, however, he was confronted with a vision of Jesus, who asked: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" Trembling and astonished, Saul asked the Lord what he should do, and was told to go on to Damascus and there he would receive further orders.

The vision had blinded Saul, so that he had to be led by the hand into the city. For three days he remained blind, and he ate and drank nothing. Then Ananias, a man sent by God, came to him, expounded the Gospel to him, and he who had been the bitter, relentless enemy of the early church now became its fearless exponent.

In Samaria, Philip was preaching the Gospel, led by the Lord's command. There, in a desert country he saw an Ethiopian—a eunuch, a man of great authority in the service of Queen Candace of that country.

The eunuch was, reading the Gospel, and Philip asked him if he knew whereof he read. The eunuch asked for instruction, and Philip expounded it to him, converting him.

We travel far abroad in the comparatively limited boundaries of the old world in this lesson. The scene now shifts to three Mediterranean cities—Lydda, Joppa and Caesarea, and Peter is the central figure.

We are told of miracles he performed—first on Aeneas who, for years, had been confined to his bed with paralysis, and who was completely healed by Peter.

The other was the raising from the dead of Tabitha, or Dorcas, a good, devout, charitable woman for whom many mourned. She was restored to her household and friends.

However, Peter himself was also "converted" by a vision vouchsafed to him by God. Asleep on the roof of a house in which he was staying, Peter had a vision of a sheet being let down from heaven in which were all manner of beasts.

A voice told him to kill and eat, as he was hungry. Peter, being a Jew, protested that he could not eat that which was considered unclean by his people. The voice said, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common."

Peter could not guess the meaning of this vision, but he was called to answer a knocking on the door. Three men had been sent to him. They came from a Roman centurion (soldier) who was a good man and true, who revered Jehovah. He had seen a vision of an angel who told him to send for a man named Simon, whose surname was Peter, and he would instruct him.

Peter then knew what his vision must mean—that he was literally to follow the Master's instructions, to preach the Gospel "unto all men."

He accompanied the messenger to the home of the centurion Cornelius, and there, before the centurion's entire household, gathered to hear him, Peter said (possibly with a smile), "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with Him."

Peter told his listeners of Jesus, His life on earth, His message, and His death and resurrection. He converted and baptized the whole household of Cornelius.

The church members in Jerusalem were at first dubious about accepting non-Jews into their congregation, but when Peter told of his vision from God, they said no more to stand by for two hours and watch a $100,000 fire sweep through an icy pier last night.

The pier, adjoining a Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad bridge over the Maumee river, was 400 feet from the shore. It was used to protect the draw bridge and mechanism from ice formation and movement. The blaze was brought under control from a tugboat.

Federal Pork Support Delayed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The government has decided not to go into the pork business—at least not if things continue as at present.

Agriculture Department officials said the price of hogs on the seven major markets will average out .50 to $1 higher than supports this week.

The government announced last week that it would buy bacon, smoked ham and smoked picnic shoulders to bolster sagging hog prices.

Why Should a Dollar's Worth of Travel Continue to Cost You $1<sup>15</sup>/<sub>100</sub>?

"IS THIS TRIP NECESSARY?" you were asked in 1941, when every inch of space was needed for troops and war supplies.

To discourage travel then, a tax was added on your travel dollar, a tax that grew to 15% during the war. The Federal Government collected it through the railroads. The Government still collects it, though your travel need not be rationed now.

Today, the original purpose of this tax is as obsolete as an Air Warden's helmet. But, four years after the war's end, YOU are still paying the Government at the rate of $250,000,000 a year in travel tax.

And, of the billion and three quarters collected since 1941, over half came out of your pocket after the green light on travel went on again.

You don't have food rationing today... you don't have gasoline rationing today.

Yet, a very real brake is still being put on travel. On a coach trip from New York to Chicago, for example, YOU are still paying $4.61 in Federal tax.

And the same with the goods that are shipped to your home community. On every dollar you pay for freight, you pay the Government an extra 3 cents (4¢ a ton on coal). That means YOU are still paying over $300,000,000 a year—freight tax alone.

This tax should be repealed NOW. There is no longer any reason you should pay $1.15 for every dollar's worth of travel... $1.03 for every dollar of railroad freight.

Blarsted 'andicapper Gives Royalty's 'orse 'eavy Weight

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—You'd think that the blarsted 'andicapper for the Grand National Steeplechase would give royalty a bit the best of it for the classic jumping event to be run at Aintree March 25.

But what does the blighter do but assign 153 pounds to Monaveen, owned by Queen Elizabeth and Princess Elizabeth.

This is only five pounds less than the bloke assigned to Russian Hero, the winner last year with an impost of 158 pounds.

The Grand National, which was first run in 1839, is undoubtedly the world's toughest horse race. They go wheeling uphill and down a dale, and around corners, for more than two miles—if they make it.

A sizeable number of them go sailing off into space like flying horses and they tumble tail over head in a heap with riders strewn all about the premises.

IT'S ENOUGH to kill a horse, and often does—and also the men on their backs, if not outright at least for further usefulness on race tracks.

Still the British insist that this race is the fairest test of 'orse-flesh. If you survive you are a fine steed. We have a few lesser races in America fashioned along similar lines, but nothing so pretentious as the Grand National.

In the first place, the great British classic is attended by crowds

5 EVENTS TO BE WATCHED

Records Expected To Fall In Annual Millrose Event

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—The veteran director of the Millrose Games said today that records may fall in up to five different events at the big indoor track carnival in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night—and the mile may be one of them.

Track-wise Fred Schmertz, boss of the Millrose, thinks that Gil Dodds' record mile mark of 4:05.3 can be assaulted either by Don Gehrmann, the frail-looking Wisconsin runner, or Fred Wilt, the well-advised FBI agent.

It is not so much the fact that both are capable of doing 4:05.3 (though they haven't done so yet) as it is, to Schmertz' way of thinking, the fact that tomorrow night's field for the Wana-maker Mile will be unusually fast.

He feels, thus, that the exceptional brand of pace involved may bring out super efforts on the part of Gehrmann, Wilt, or both.

IT COULD BE, for that matter, that Ireland's scampering John Joe Barry will be going for it all; or Yale's George Wade, John Twomey of Illinois AC, or Tom Kirwas of Penn.

"A truly high-calibre field," Schmertz declares.

Looking further, the meet director thinks one of the hurdlers—Harrison Dillard, Craig Dixon, Bill Fleming or Jim Gehdes—can tie or break the Millrose record of 7.2 seconds in the 60-yard high hurdles.

Andy Stanfield, dread operative from Seton Hall who holds the IC4A 60, 100 and 220 yard and National AAU 100 and 200 meter sprint titles, will be shooting at the Millrose and world indoor 60-yard mark of 6.1 seconds.

In the mile relay, NYU and Cornell both menace the local record of 3:19.8, and in the two-mile relay event Villanova has a crack foursome that could well eclipse the present 7:44 standard.

Nobody seriously expects Cornelius Warmerdam's pole vault record of 15-and-a-half-plus feet to fall, but funny things have been happening lately. Bob Smith, from San Diego State, has a new spun-glass-fibre pole that's supposed to work wonders, and Don Laz, of Illinois, will be on hand too. He cleared 15 feet last weekend—something nobody but Warmerdam had ever done before.

Local Juniors Make Up For Chillicothe Loss

Circleville junior high school basketballers Thursday made up for an early season loss by handing invading Chillicothe West Fifth youngsters a 23-17 defeat.

The win for the locals, however, came in the second half after the invaders dominated the first portion of the contest.

Chillicothe scored an 8-4 first period lead, pushing ahead again at the mid-mark to score a 12-10 advantage. The locals found the lead for the first time during the third quarter to post a 17-16 tally, while advancing to the final 23-17 score in the finale.

Don Skinner paced the local juniors to the win with a total of eight points.

Junior High Cagers Await County Tourney

New Holland and Washington Township basketball teams will meet at 1 p. m. Saturday in Jackson Township school gym to open the 1950 Pickaway County junior tournament.

A complete first round will be played Saturday. Second round play will be held Monday, with semi-finals slated for Wednesday and the finals carded for Feb. 1.

Remainder of the first round schedule is: South Bloomfield vs. Ashville at 2 p. m.; Salt Creek vs. Walnut at 3 p. m.; Wayne Township vs. Deer Creek at 4 p. m.; Darby vs. Muhlenberg at 7 p. m.; Pickaway vs. Jackson at 8 p. m.; and Scioto vs. Atlanta at 9 p. m.

Monroe, which drew a bye for the first round of play, will meet the winner of the New Holland-Washington game at 6 p. m. Monday to open the second round.

Nearly 600 seats will be available for junior tournament, according to Jackson officials, while as many as 1,000 may crowd in to watch the matches to fill up standing room.

Baseball Rule Changes Ready

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—President George M. Trautman of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues announced today the first publication of baseball rules in their revised and recodified form.

He also announced that to bring about complete understanding of the rules he tentatively has planned seven rule interpretation clinics the first week in April for league presidents, umpires, managers and club personnel.

Tris Speaker To Aid Clinic

CLEVELAND, Jan. 27—Tris Speaker, one of baseball's all-time greats, will be one of the speakers at the coaching clinic conducted by the Cleveland Indians Saturday for high school and college coaches and sandlot and semipro managers.

Others scheduled to talk at the clinic are Coaches Muddy Ruel and Mel Harder, Outfielder Bob Kennedy and Former Tribesman Joe Vosmik.

IT SURE IS, for the jockeys are admiring Rube Marquard, once one of baseball's great pitchers, and the Rube, a clerk in the mutual department at Tropical Park, Coral Gables, Fla., has plenty of admiration for the little guys. The jockeys are (from left) George Stidham, Mike Danisi, Pewee Shaw, Jimmy Purser and Sam Boulemetis. Florida racing shifts to Hialeah Jan. 17. (International)

OSU CAGE STAR SLIPPING?

Experts Fear Schnittker May Be Burning Self Out

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—Is Ohio State's Dick Schnittker burning himself out on the nation's basketball courts?

The six-foot, five-inch All-America forward and his coach, little Tippy Dye, may maintain Big Dick is OK, but the feeling is growing among Columbus newsmen that Schnittker is a very tired boy.

You wouldn't know from the giant cage ace's performances to date, for he's been going better than ever this year. However, the question seems to be, "how long can he keep it up?"

Schnittker's feats as a football star last fall after two years' non-participation in the grid sport are almost legendary now on the Ohio State campus.

Whether the long grind of the regular football season plus extended drills for the Bucks' Rose Bowl appearance have taken their toll of the Sandusky youth remains to be seen.

Schnittker started off like a house afire for the 1949-50 Buck cagers. With only a few days practice he dropped in 22 points in Ohio's opening game against DePaul.

AGAINST Marquette in the Bucks' second test, he hit for 33 markers, a new Ohio State record.

As a matter of fact, he has been Ohio's leading scorer in each of the nine games he has participated in so far this season.

And in those nine games, he totaled 202 points for a 21.3 per-game average, one of the best in the nation.

Should Schnittker keep going, he might still surpass the Big Ten scoring mark of 22.3 points per game hung up by Iowa's Murray Weir during the 1947-48 season.

Furthermore, every time he sinks a field goal or a foul shot he rewrites the Ohio State record book. His three-year total so far already has reached 860 points, close to 200 more than that compiled by any other cager in Buck history.

But the Buckeye sharpshooter, probably the hardest worker on the current squad, appears to have slowed down considerably in Ohio's last few tests.

Saturday against Illinois he was held to 16 points, his lowest output of the season. Monday against Iowa he dropped in 21, but needed rest frequently.

According to those familiar with Schnittker's previous performances, he now appears tense, taut—whereas in the past he usually was the most relaxed man on the court.

With Ohio State currently on top in the Big Ten scramble and eight conference frays still to be played, Schnittker can't afford to take it easy.

As he goes, so go Ohio State's basketball fortunes.

Tribe, Dodgers Book Benefit

CLEVELAND, Jan. 27—The Cleveland Indians and the Brooklyn Dodgers meet in an exhibition game here July 12 with the proceeds going to some 18,000 city sandlotters.

Ellis W. Ryan, Tribe president, made the announcement last night that the benefit game, originated by Former Owner Bill Veeck, would continue.

The contest will mark the third meeting of the Indians and "Dem Bums" for the cause of the sandlotters' medical equipment funds. The first game brought an all-time exhibition attendance record of 64,877 and produced $79,000 to the fund.

Big Spring Pig Losses Feared

Ag Agent Gives Tips On Disease

Animal Health Said Necessary

Disease is expected to take a heavy toll of next Spring's baby pig crop—probably one out of every four pigs farrowed throughout the nation.

That was the warning given Pickaway County farmers Friday by Larry Best, county agricultural extension agent.

Best, now taking a special instruction course in Ohio State university on hog care, said the prediction was based on a statement made by the American Foundation for Animal Health.

The worst part of this alarming situation, the county agent said, is that most of the losses will be unnecessary.

HE GAVE a checklist stressing five points to help swine producers avoid heavy death losses:

"1. Balanced feeding of the sow during gestation. A good ration should include necessary minerals, iodine (to prevent farrowing of dead, hairless pigs), and Vitamins A and D. Mixing a small amount of irradiated yeast with the ration will help supply plenty of Vitamin D, while high-grade, green alfalfa hay will meet the Vitamin A requirements.

"2. Maintaining clean farrowing pens and transportation of sow and litter to clean ground to avoid parasites and disease germs.

"3. Keeping quarters warm, dry and well ventilated, and installing guard rails to avoid crushing of pigs.

"4. Feeding the sow few solids during the first 36 hours after farrowing, then slowly returning her to a regular ration.

"5. Keeping a sharp lookout for sickly pigs and getting a prompt diagnosis of the trouble before disease can spread to the entire pig crop."

Unemployment Claims Nearly Double 1948

Claims for unemployment compensation in Pickaway County during the last month in 1949 were almost double the number filed in the same period of 1948.

During the month a total of 131 new claims were filed, and 1,259 continued claims. December records for 1948 reveal that only 73 new claims were filed, and 624 continued claims.

According to Mary Wolf, clerk, the December total of new claims was lower than the 178 filed in November. Continued claims, however, showed a jump upward, with 1,115 filed in November.

Miss Wolf said a total of 2,278 visits were made to the local office in December. The previous month's total was 2,059. New applications for employment reached 75 in December, less than the 84 recorded in November.

She said the office made five industrial placements in December. The month before 24 were made. Ten employer visits were made in December by C. C. Thomas, local BUC manager.

Looking Ahead

By George Benson
President
Harding College

A great labor organization got down to earth the other day with some real thinking on a resolution for the new year. A story from Washington dated Dec. 26 said:

"The American Federation of Labor today proposed that management and labor get together in 1950 to cut production costs and that labor get a wage increase as its share of the result in saving."

That's talking real turkey!

Labor is right in suggesting that employees deserve a share of what is saved when production costs are reduced. I believe that workers ought to have higher wages, when they can produce more goods without increasing costs in other ways. Actually, there is no sound way to increase wages—except greater productivity. Our production per man day has jumped 500 percent during the past 100 years. That explains today's good wages.

THROUGHOUT the industrial history of America, most industries have paid about all they could afford to pay in wages. There have been some exceptions. But in general, as productivity increased wages climbed higher. Because of modern methods and good tools, productivity per man day has doubled during the last 33 years. The reward for great output and efficiency has been a very high level of wages.

But what's been happening lately? In the past five years wages have been pushed upward by artificial means. Heavy pressure from both unions and government has shoved them upward faster than productivity has increased.

Naturally, these methods create dislocations and encourage inflation. I believe we have reached the point where any further steps in that direction would bring unemployment and encourage depression.

Now, this AF of L plea that labor join with management to bring down production costs for the purpose of obtaining higher wages is a real ray of hope. It makes exceeding good sense. For example, I am told that in the housing industry the cost of laying brick could be brought way down, with the right kind of cooperation of employees and management. Here is a condition that has hurt construction progress and slowed the building of homes throughout the nation.

I UNDERSTAND that a good bricklayer can lay 800 to 1,200 bricks a day without much difficulty. However, a good many builders have told me that the union will allow their bricklayers to put up only 350 to 400 per day. If this industry represents a fair example of what could be done with full cooperation of labor and management, surely there are great strides to be made in the years ahead toward achieving higher living standards for the people of America.

Experts tell us that America's living standards have advanced in direct proportion to productivity per man day.

This simply means that increased production will bring about increases in living standards. My conviction is that good labor-management co-operation could increase productivity per man day another 100 percent within the next 33 years. This would bring a 100 percent increase in living standards.

This miracle will happen again, only if labor and management pull together. If they solve our industrial problems in an intelligent way America will reach higher and higher levels of output. Not only will this cooperation insure plenty of jobs and the goods we need, it will do much to reverse the trend toward statism, which threatens to reduce every American's standard of living to the same low level.

FOLLOWING THEIR ARREST in Baltimore, Md., in connection with the death of their six-week-old son, Tony, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Waskis are shown with another son, Joseph, and the arresting officer. Police accused the couple of causing the death of the baby after they allegedly had tried to sell the child for $2,500. The parents are being held without bail pending action by the grand jury.

$428,000 PUT ON DOORSTEP

Big Batch Of Aga Khan's Gems Returned To Police

MARSEILLE, Jan. 27—More than $428,000 worth of the $608,000 in jewels taken from the Aga Khan last Aug. 3 in a tommygun holdup turned up mysteriously today on the doorstep of Marseille police headquarters.

A terse note wrapped with the jewels claimed that the remainder was in the possession of a gang leader originally reported slain along with his mistress during a squabble over division of the loot.

An intercontinental search was launched for the pair, still at large with three other members of the gang. Six persons linked in the crime are already in jail. Three experts who examined the more than 250 jewels found in the package said none of the restored gems were in their original form, all had been dismantled from their settings—apparently to make disposal easier. They lost considerable value in the process.

INCLUDED in the package found in the police doorway were several of the precious stones taken from the Aga and his wife near Cannes on the French Riviera. But there were none of the original exquisite settings.

The restored jewels included: One 40-carat cut diamond valued at nearly $35,000; one eight-carat rose brilliant; and eight-carat diamond; 13 rose brilliants totalling 39 carats; 199 square-cut diamonds totalling 114 carats; one lot of diamonds totalling 50 carats, and one lot of "small" stones of four to five carats each.

Police received an anonymous phone call telling them to look in the doorway. There

Queen Mary's Carpet Offered

LONDON, Jan. 27—Queen Mother Mary has decided to do something personally about Britain's dollar shortage.

She has offered the government an exquisite carpet on which she worked eight years with the stipulation that it be sold either in the United States or Canada.

The carpet, ten feet, two inches long and six feet, nine and one-half inches wide, originally was destined for Windsor Castle.

But in characteristic fashion, the queen mother changed her mind and decided to use it to get the much-needed dollars.

they found the package and a note saying: "We are returning herewith the greater part of the Begum's jewels. The other part is in possession of Senedj. Leca is innocent."

The Begum is the wife of the Aga Khan, Rita Hayworth's father-in-law. Big Roger Senedj was the gang leader reported slain along with his sweetheart, Renee Remy. Leca, another gang member, is still at large.

$100,000 In Gems Lost To Thugs By Billy Rose

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—Showman Billy Rose and his private mermaid, Eleanor Holm Rose, arrived home from a gay theatrical party at 1:20 a. m. today to find their art-filled Beekman Place town house looted of more than $100,000 in gems.

The high-karat loot was taken by three husky thugs who muscled their way into the lavishly furnished premises at gunpoint, trussed up Rose's butler and locked him in his room while they leisurely looted the premises.

Major portion of the haul was part of Mrs. Rose's fabulous collection of diamonds, which she had left locked in her safe in the dressing room just off her bedroom, whose terrace overlooks the East River.

Ironically, the hit song of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," the musical which occupies the Ziegfeld theatre, owned by Rose, is: "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend."

The hefty burglars, who trussed Rose's butler, James McDonald, also made off with about $5,000 worth of Rose's "best friends," men's jewelry.

The latter included a platinum and diamond watch and chain, diamond and platinum dress studs and cufflinks, a diamond tie clasp and other expensive masculine baubles.

Recalling that his wife had worn a diamond bracelet, necklace and other pieces valued at $250,000, he remarked:

"Thank God she put on her war paint tonight."

He said most of the loot was insured.

A-BOMB THEORY IS POOH-POOHED

Polar Ice Cap Is Blamed For This Unusual Weather

You can blame—or praise—the polar ice caps for Ohio's more than unusual weather this month.

The mercury's elevator-like actions lately have been very mysterious. Only Wednesday, it zoomed up to a high of 77. Thursday's high, Weatherman John Smith reported, was 53—a substantial drop.

According to the U. S. Weather Bureau, Ohioans have had one of the wettest, warmest and fickle months in history simply because the frigid air mass to the north has acted queerly for the last two years.

According to Mr. Weatherman, the center of the polar front normally pushes its way into the United States near the Minnesota-North Dakota border. This year and last it's been coming in about 500 miles further westward.

SOME PEOPLE have held that the atom bomb explosions have caused the change, but the weatherman pooh-poos this theory.

"But don't ask me to explain why the center of the polar front has shifted—a lot of research has yet to be done before anyone can give an answer," he said.

But along with the warmer weather has come a deluge of rainfall which has shattered existing records in almost every city of the state. Rivers, normally ice-bound at this time, have overflowed banks and Winter crop roots have pushed their way up toward the surface.

If all the rain which has fallen on the state this month alone were snow instead, a blanket of white ranging in depth from five to eight feet would cover the state.

The weatherman said an inch of rainfall is usually equivalent to about 10 inches of snow in average conditions. On that basis, the nearly 10 inches which fell on Cincinnati so far this month would have piled up nearly 100 inches—more than eight feet—of snow.

Columbus has recorded six inches, Cleveland seven and Lima nearly eight and a half inches. Both Cleveland and Lima broke existing records for rainfall in January as did nearly every other reporting point in the state.

DAILY AVERAGE temperatures have fluctuated greatly, but the average daily temperatures are about 13 degrees above normal for the stage, making this month one of the warmest of all time.

However, a continued period of low temperatures for the remaining days of the month could well lower the monthly average.

The ups-and-downs of the mercury have created a problem for the state's farmers. Wheat and root crops, coaxed to near the surface by the balmy weather, are vulnerable to quick freezes.

Another highlight of unseasonal temperatures is the savings to coal, gas and oil users—savings which have been particularly welcomed by coal users who have not been able to get all the supply they have wanted this year because of the coal strike.

Secret Service Gypped In Bogus Money Exchange

NEW YORK, Jan. 27—Three men who attempted to peddle $200,000 in bogus money for $60,000 in cash, were held by police today following their seizure by Secret Service agents who posed as "interested buyers for the Far East."

A fourth man, identified as John J. Stancin, was jailed in Los Angeles and federal authorities and police expressed belief a nationwide counterfeit ring might be involved.

The New York trio was arrested by Secret Service agents immediately after they closed the deal for $40,000 in cash. Police said the $200,000 in bogus money was carried in two suitcases and was in ten and twenty dollar bills.

They said the men, all of whom had police records, told the prospective buyers that the suitcases contained $300,000 in counterfeit money for which they demanded $60,000 in cash.

The Secret Service agents, who came to New York from Los Angeles to set the trap, objected.

Pud Hall Taken To Cincinnati

Walter (Pud) Hall, proprietor of a Circleville cafe, was in Cincinnati Friday awaiting talks with Hamilton County police officials.

Carl Myers, special investigator for Hamilton County police, had only a "no comment" when asked concerning Hall. The local man was contacted here Thursday night by Hamilton and Pickaway County sheriff's officials. Circleville police, not in on the investigation, had no information on the case.

Milk Price War Hits Youngstown

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 27—Price of milk in the Youngstown area has been forced down as much as 5-1/2 cents a quart by a bulk milk price war between distributors and the McAllister farm stores.

Milk is being sold over the counter in bulk at 45 cents a gallon, or 23 cents for two quarts.

Experts Alerted To Keep Tab On Planet Mars

ALBUQUERQUE, Jan. 27—Astronomers all over the world were asked today to make a special observation of the planet Mars where a "terrific explosion" was reported to have occurred Jan. 16.

The request for close study of the planet came from Walter Haas of Albuquerque, director of the International Association of Lunar and Planetary Observers.

Haas said the explosive evidence was observed by Tsuneko Saheki of Osaka, Japan, director of the Mars section of the Oriental Astronomical Association.

Saheki, observing Mars at approximately 4:30 a. m. (Japanese time), said he noted a peculiar "bulge" at the edge of the planet.

On close inspection, he said the bulge appeared to be a grayish cloud, which he estimated to be 900 miles across and some 60 miles off the surface of the planet.

Haas said the color was especially significant since most clouds observed on Mars are either bluish or yellowish, indicating vapor and dust respectively. He said the gray color could indicate a volcanic eruption, and as such, would be extremely important and interesting.

He said Mars will be observable from the United States about Feb. 3, and on March 23, it will have moved an estimated 40 million miles closer to Earth. It presently is situated in the constellation Virgo about 100 million miles from Earth.

Helmstedt Block Still In Force

BERLIN, Jan. 27—Russia continued its partial blockade of Berlin today despite angry Western demands for "immediate removal" of traffic barriers.

More than 200 Berlin-bound trucks were backed up at the Helmstedt checkpoint leading to Berlin. There was a constant backlog of 100 west-bound trucks.

All other Allied traffic was normal, trains were running on schedule and all border points except Helmstedt were completely open.

Ruby Bracelet Center Of Tale

A suspense-packed mystery story starts in today's issue of The Circleville Herald.

Written by Brett Halliday, the story is titled "Blood on the Stars." Just as colorful as the title implies, the story is about rubies, robberies and murder. It features the adventures of Michael Shayne, famous young detective, who solves the mysterious theft of a star-ruby bracelet and the murder of the girl who wore it.

Prober Asks New Hearing

Chambers Sought For Testimony

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—Rep. Nixon, (R) Calif., asked the House Un-American Activities Committee today to reopen the Whitaker Chambers spy case.

The top-ranking Republican committee member said he would formally ask his group to hold public hearings again now that Alger Hiss has been convicted of perjury, largely on Chambers' evidence.

Nixon told newsmen that the "full story of the Communist conspiracy in the government" in pre-Pearl Harbor days has not yet been brought to light. Nixon, who is seeking election to the U. S. Senate, charged in the House that secret information from a Soviet informer which accused Hiss of being a Soviet "agent" was made "available" to President Truman in November 1945.

Nixon stated that the information was obtained from Igor Gouzenko, Soviet code clerk who "broke" the Canadian spy ring, by an American intelligence agency.

The Californian revealed also that since last December he has had photographic copies of eight pages of documents in the handwriting of former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Harry Dexter White, now deceased.

NIXON SAID these documents, which contained confidential information, was turned over by Chambers to the Justice Department. White was among those named by Chambers as cooperating with the Communist "apparatus," but denied the accusation during an appearance before the committee. He died shortly thereafter from a heart attack.

Nixon urged that the committee summon persons named by Chambers, self-confessed former Soviet espionage agent, but who were not questioned during the previous investigation because of a desire not to interfere with the Hiss trial.

The committee closed its investigation in December 1948 after the former State Department official was named by Chambers as the man who handed him secret documents for transmission to Russia.

Feb. 13 Is Set For Jury Call

Pickaway County grand jury will be called Feb. 13, according to Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff.

Normally called in January, date for calling the first 1950 grand jury was delayed to give attorneys time to work on rural income taxes.

County Prosecutor Guy Cline said approximately 40 cases will be up for consideration by the jury panel.

St. Peter's Bones Found?

LONDON, Jan. 27—A Reuter dispatch from Vatican City reported today that Pope Pius soon will announce that the tomb of St. Peter actually has been found beneath St. Peter's church.

Excavations have been underway for months in the belief that the bones lie in a crypt almost directly beneath the present tomb of St. Peter.

$900 Million Now Ready For Release For Defense

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—President Truman plans today to issue a proclamation approving the release of $900 million for the integrated defense of Atlantic Pact powers.

Later the United States will sign eight bilateral agreements with as many pact nations, setting down the terms under which they will receive U. S. military equipment to bring their fighting forces to full efficiency.

The nations involved are Britain, France, Italy, Denmark, Belgium, The Netherlands, Luxembourg and Norway.

It is anticipated that these agreements will provide for a small U. S. military mission in each participating nation. Its purpose will be to assemble the new equipment and train the soldiers who will man it in its use and maintenance.

THE PRESIDENTIAL proclamation was made necessary by the law establishing the military assistance program. Congress provided that only $100 million of the $1 billion appropriated could be used before an integrated defense plan for the defense of Western Europe had been approved.

The defense plan was set up at a meeting of the defense committee of the pact powers in Paris last December. The chief executive has been studying the plan since then.

Goods to be furnished the European powers are expected to start moving within a month. The exact nature of the supplies given each country and the amounts will be kept a military secret.

However, France was expected to be the chief recipient because of her exposed position. The French army will not be increased, but the soldiers will be fully equipped with modern weapons and trained in their use.

Emphasis is expected to be placed on heavy tanks, fighter planes, anti-tank guns and bazookas.

Until late yesterday it had been doubtful whether Britain would join in the formal signing of the bilateral agreements. For weeks London has held off agreeing to the terms of the compact largely because clarification of technical details were demanded.

These included such matters as the interpretation of the provision that a recipient country could not transfer U. S. equipment to another country.

These details finally were waived and the text agreed on late yesterday.

Bricker Seeks 'Most And Best' In A-Weapons

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—Sen. Bricker, (R) Ohio, returned today to the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee and immediately demanded the "most and the best" atomic weapons for the U. S.

Bricker, a former member, re-joins the committee today as result of the resignation of the Veteran, Sen. Vandenberg, (R) Mich.

Asked if he favors pressing ahead on development of the super-powerful hydrogen bomb, Bricker said:

"We ought to develop every phase of nuclear physics. We should always keep in mind the possibility of adapting atomic energy to civilian needs."

"But as long as it is a weapon we should have the most and the best."

At the same time, Bricker reiterated his opposition to David E. Lillenthal as Atomic Energy Commission chairman and said he stands ready to support Sen. Hickenlooper, (R) Iowa, if the

President To Get No Directive

Lewis Accepts Bid To Renegotiate

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—The Senate Labor Committee today killed legislation asking President Truman to act in the coal dispute after John L. Lewis accepted an offer to resume contract talks with Northern-Western operators.

The committee postponed indefinitely further action on a resolution calling on Mr. Truman to use the Taft-Hartley law's 80-day injunction to put the miners back on a full five-day work week. The committee vote was 6 to 5.

Sen. Aiken, (R) Vt., said the postponement was equivalent to killing the proposal.

Sen. Humphrey, (D) Minn., offered the motion to put off action on the measure. He said:

"We have evidence negotiations are under way through collective bargaining to settle the crisis. Any action affirmative or negative by this committee would impair or prejudice the negotiations."

"I FELT WE would be doing a disservice to a quick settlement."

Lewis' acceptance of the Northern-Western operators' invitation to renew wage negotiations also may be the signal for 90,000 striking miners to return to work Monday.

The United Mine Workers' president thus far has issued no public orders but it is believed that the word will circulate in the coal fields that all hands should be on the job next week. Most of the strikers, who have been idle for the last three weeks, are employed by the producers with whom Lewis will renew negotiations next Wednesday in Washington.

If the strikes are ended, President Truman is not expected to intervene in the coal dispute.

The Federal Bureau of Mines reported that coal supplies are at the danger point but officials apparently believe an emergency can be averted if all the 480,000 soft and hard coal diggers work three days a week.

Bituminous coal production remained almost constant last

Real Estate Tax Books To Open Feb. 15

Books for collection of real estate taxes in Pickaway County for the first half of 1949 will be opened Feb. 15, closed March 20, according to Robert Colville, county treasurer.

Colville said tax rates for the county have been approved by the state department of taxation with the exception of the Waterloo school district which overlaps into Fayette County.

He said the Fayette County rates have not been approved yet, and that the Waterloo school district "will be ignored here until such time as we get a rate for it."

The closing date was set for March 20 in order to get the distribution in the hands of school boards before the close of school, the county treasurer explained.

Bradley Urges Free Effort

TROY, N. Y., Jan. 27—General Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said today that American scientists must be allowed to carry their discoveries to ultimate perfection "no matter how fearsome the result may be."

Bradley's statement was taken to mean he fully endorses manufacture of a hydrogen bomb described as 1,000 times more powerful than the World War II A-bomb. President Truman is trying to decide whether such a bomb ought to be made, in the face of some suggestions that an H-bomb would be too "terrible" a weapon.

week, despite further mine shut-downs.

A National Coal Association report, based on incomplete car loading reports from the nation's railroads, today listed production for the week ending Jan. 21 as approximately 7,250,000 tons. Production the week before reached just 7,420,000.

THE ASSOCIATION said production for the corresponding week last year was 11,460,000 net tons.

Production through Jan. 21 of this year was placed at approximately 20,320,000 tons. Production for the similar period of 1949 was 34,895,000.

Lewis accepted an invitation of Northern and Western operators to resume bargaining. The industry representatives set forth a half-dozen conditions that any new agreement must meet.

However, Lewis said the miners are ready "to negotiate in good faith, without stipulation, qualification or commitment."

Negotiations for a new coal-wage agreement to replace the pact which expired last June 30 were broken off last October when both the Northern and Southern operators decided that further talks would be futile.

The UMW is demanding a 95-cent-a-day wage increase for the miners and a boost of 15 cents in the operators' present 20 cents a ton contribution to the union welfare program. Major producers have rejected these terms, but Lewis has signed such a contract with a group of independent mine owners producing about 31 million tons of coal annually.

Bricker Seeks 'Most And Best' In A-Weapons

Iowan "has any reason for further inquiry" into how the program has worked.

As an atomic committee senator in the GOP-controlled 80th Congress, Bricker alone voted against confirmation of the appointment of Lillenthal, who has resigned and will leave the AEC chairmanship Feb. 15.

As Bricker regained the committee post, colleagues paid tribute to the work of Vandenberg. One of them declared that time may show that on "three or four occasions the Michigan senator's wisdom may have saved the country."

Vandenberg had an important part in writing the nation's atomic law. He was author of a compromise which satisfied both the strong advocates of "civilian control" and those who believed that the military branch should have a stronger hand in the program.

Pressure Groups Are Listed As Seeking Session

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—Nearly a score of so-called "pressure groups" had to be turned down by Governor Lausche when he decided that a special session of the Ohio Legislature was not necessary to solve the state's fiscal, old age pension and voting problems.

The governor today released a list of 16—count 'em—requests he had received and said they were just "part of the subjects that I was asked to include in the agenda of the legislature in the event it was called into extraordinary session."

The list of other demands released by Lausche included:

Amendment of the law which now prevents councilmen from holding other public office;

Provide funds for the payment of salaries and expenses of the non-moneyless Ohio Turnpike Commission;

Provide more money for local poor relief;

Enact a fair employment practices law;

Enact a uniform municipal court bill;

Increase jobless pay benefits;

Liberalize workmen's compensation payments;

Increase pensions of public workers;

Add two more common pleas judges for Franklin county;

Pay Ralph Eaches of Richmond for the 13 months he served in Ohio Penitentiary for a Marion supermarket robbery he did not commit;

Stiffen the laws against sex crimes;

Tighten the laws against house-breaking;

Restrict the right of the state to collect for the support of patients in mental institutions;

Adopt legislation for the control and prevention of air pollution in city areas;

Permit county election boards to operate mobile registration units.

Troy White Files Petition For Election

Troy W. White of Pickaway Township has filed a petition for nomination as Democratic candidate for county commissioner in the May primary election.

Only other petition filed up to Friday morning was by Lyman Penn, Republican, to succeed himself as county commissioner, according to Pickaway County board of election officials.

Petitions are still being circulated by Fred Tipton seeking nomination as Republican candidate for county auditor, D. A. Yates and Ed Wallace, both seeking the Democratic nomination for representative to the state general assembly.

H. E. Lewis, Republican incumbent, has also taken out a petition for state representative. Circulating petitions for county commissioner are Harley Mace, Democrat, and Harry E. Montelius, Republican.

Board officials said deadline for filing is next Wednesday.

Lamb Declines Big Election

TOLEDO, Jan. 27—Toledo attorney, television station owner and newspaper publisher Edward Lamb announced today he will not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination to the United States Senate in the May primaries.

Lamb stated the press of professional business and affairs led him to reject any possible candidacy. He added that he will support "enthusiastically" whomever becomes the Democratic nominee in the race against Senator Robert A. Taft.

Mt. Sterling will have its own shoe repair shop in the near future because of the efforts of four organizations to aid a 27-year-old polio victim.

UAW Joins Blast At Big Steel For Price Hike

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—The CIO Auto Workers Union recommended today that congressional hearings precede any further steel industry price increases.

The suggestion was made by a spokesman for UAW President Walter Reuther at the congressional economic committee's inquiry into the price boost of last December.

Donald Montgomery, Washington representative of the union, said he was not proposing any form of "price regulation," but he recommended that a method be found to conduct congressional hearings on price revisions in a basic industry before they are imposed.

He told newsmen that what he had in mind was a law that would require a price-setting corporation—U. S. Steel in the case of the steel industry—to appear before a congressional committee and discuss its plans before putting a price boost through.

Spokesman, CIO Steelworkers' spokesman, Montgomery attacked steel industry claims that the December price boost was caused by increased costs resulting from pension and insurance programs secured by the employees.

There has been no agreement on the true amount of the boost, with the industry claiming it averaged under four dollars a ton and the unions placing it much higher. It was increased Dec. 16 by U. S. Steel, with the rest of the big producers following suit.

2 Persons Hurt In Crash At Routes 22, 104

Two cars were considerably damaged and two persons slightly injured Thursday in a two-car crash at the intersection of Routes 22 and 104 east of Circleville.

State Highway Patrolman Charles Watters said a car operated by Thomas J. Vernia, 43, of Chillicothe, had been travelling north on Route 104 at the time and had failed to stop for a stop sign at the intersection.

Vernia's auto was smashed in the right front by an auto driven by Charles W. Scott, 19, of Monaca, Pa. Two passengers in the Scott auto received minor bruises.

The Chillicothe driver was haled into Circleville mayor's court, where he was fined $10 and costs for failing to yield the right of way.

Burglar Gets $20 In Home

Henry Mader of 114 Pinckney street told Circleville police that his wife had scared off the thief when she entered the front door of the home at about 7 p. m. Thursday.

Mader said the thief had climbed a grape arbor at the rear of the home, had crawled upon a back porch roof and had broken an upstairs window to gain entrance.

From there, Mader said, the burglar went downstairs, ransacked several drawers, and had found a $20 bill before Mrs. Mader frightened him.

GREAT ADVANCES

Great advances have been made during the past 12 years in the treatment of infantile paralysis. In 1938 when the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis was formed, a physician and a nurse usually comprised the polio care team. Today's team may include as many as 13 professional workers. This expanded care has required the expenditure of millions of dollars through the years. Last year the problem of rising medical costs was more acute than ever before because of the record polio epidemic which swept the land. You can help uphold the high standards of care for the victims of this disease by contributing today to the 1950 March of Dimes.

No Railroaders Here To Get Layoff, Belief

Circleville railroaders apparently will remain on the job even though an announcement was made Friday that more than 500 Columbus area railroad workers were furloughed because of the coal shortage.

The layoff was on the Pennsylvania Railroad division and followed an announcement from the company in Philadelphia that 15,000 had been laid off throughout the system.

W. E. Hilyard, Pennsy freight agent in Circleville, said he expects none of the local workmen to be laid off since the local line operates exclusively with diesel engines.

A. V. Osborn, freight agent for the Norfolk and Western Railway here said he has "not heard of any layoffs yet and hope we don't have any."

Meanwhile, Circleville coal yards report their supplies are meagre, one yard reporting it has about five days' supply on hand and another stating it has about two days' supply.

The coal men added that the situation has been about the same all winter, with just a few cars of coal rolling in every now and then.

The will of Cynthia Neal, leaving an estimated $16,000 estate, has been admitted to probate in Pickaway County probate court.

The will bequeaths five shares of stock in Scioto Bank of Commercial Point, to be divided equally, and $1,000 each to Frances Dountz and Ruth Leupold, daughters.

Rest of the estate is bequeathed to Watson F. Neal, son. It includes a 118 acre farm in Scioto Township, known as the Eva Deckart farm. The will specifies that the $1,000 bequests to the daughters be charged to the farm.

Judge George D. Young appointed Watson F. Neal executor of the estate.

British Ship Said Attacked

HONG KONG, Jan. 27—Reports reaching Hong Kong today said a Chinese Nationalist gunboat shelled a blockade-running British vessel 17 miles outside of Amoy.

The reports identified the merchantman as the "Cloverlock" and said the attack took place last night while the ship was enroute to Hong Kong. The ship was said to have been hit several times but there were no casualties and the damage was described as not serious.

Two Escapees Found Guilty In Cincy Jail Case

CINCINNATI, Jan. 27—Two escapees were found guilty, a third was declared innocent, and Sheriff Dan Tehan suspended two guards late yesterday in connection with a 10-man break from Hamilton County's "escape proof" jail Jan. 7.

Judge Charles S. Bell is considering the charges against a fourth escapee. The prisoners are to be sentenced later.

Lee W. Robertson, 33, of Columbus, charged with conspiring to escape and with malicious destruction of property, was found guilty about two hours after his case went to the jury at 4:43 p. m.

The jury found Charles Hall, 33, of Cincinnati, innocent on the first count, but guilty on the second. Elmer Teeters, 19, of Cincinnati was found innocent of conspiring to escape from the jail, the only charge on which he was tried.

William Martin, 22, of Cincinnati, was tried on both charges before Judge Bell alone after the cases of the other three men went to the jury.

Meanwhile, Tehan suspended Guards Walter Sommerhalder, 57, and August C. Potts, 58, for negligence and laxness in duty. They are the men who inspected the cell block in which a planned break had been reported. Both were appointed by the sheriff from civil service lists last May.

Lustron Claims It Can Break Even In 1950

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—Carl G. Strandlund, president of Lustron Corp. in Columbus, and his chief executives have predicted the giant prefabricated housing plant can break even or show a profit in 1950—if the federal government puts $5 million more in the kitty.

The predictions came yesterday in a news conference at which Lustron unveiled six new home models—one of them a lower-priced two-bedroom house selling for $6,900.

The new cut-price "Newport" model has conventional heating but lacks some of the built-in features of the higher priced types Lustron has found some difficulty in selling.

General Sales Manager W. A. Mathewson predicted the firm will sell 8,000 houses this year—enough to break even.

Strandlund said he has $300,000 of his own money invested in the business and other private capital comes to nearly $20 million.

The Reconstruction Finance Corp. has threatened to foreclose on the $37.5 million it has loaned Lustron.

EXTENSION WORK DETAILED

Agricultural Television Programs Being Prepared

A series of shows devoted to agricultural subjects is to start this month on Columbus television stations.

C. M. Ferguson, director of the Ohio Agricultural Extension Service, told Circleville Rotary Club Thursday the series will consist of one show per month.

The director said two experimental shows have been aired so far. They will become a regular feature starting this month, he said, adding that Ohio is pioneering in this field.

"Since most of the television sets are owned by urban families, the shows will deal with subjects of primary interest to consumers," he explained.

Director Ferguson traced for Rotarians, each of whom had a farmer guest, the history of extension service from its start as a service to bring facts learned in agricultural experiment stations of land grant colleges to the farmers.

THE EFFECT has been to extend colleges into rural areas, he asserted, adding that Ohio State university is not restricted to Columbus, but reaches down to Pickaway County through the extension service.

He pointed out that 21 percent of finances to support extension work is furnished by appropriations by county commissioners, 23 percent from state legislatures and 56 from Congress. The money supplied by county commissioners is spent only in the county where the appropriation originated.

Extension work, said Ferguson, is primarily an educational program. He drew a distinction between education and schooling, however, pointing out that schooling is no more than the running start a person gets for the education he is expected to pick up throughout the rest of his life.

Declaring that education can be bad as well as good, Ferguson said extension programs are aimed to educate in a constructive direction. It deals with the things people know, their skills and their changes in attitude or thinking, he explained.

The work reaches from nutrition of rural families to the clothing they wear. Its effect is even more far reaching than appears on the surface, because "few urban centers populate themselves. They depend on the rural supply."

FERGUSON SAID that while it is not the job of extension service workers to shape public policy, it is their job to get the facts and give them to the people so that they can develop their own public policy.

The extension director dwelt briefly on the work the service performs with 4H clubs. Youngsters in 4H club work, he said, learn to "win without bragging, and to lose without squealing."

He paid homage to the parents of youngsters engaged in 4H club work, describing them as the best type of teachers. He declared 4H club work to be "one of the finest things done by the extension service."

Yank Warships Probe Thefts

TOKYO, Jan. 27—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's chief of operations announced today American warships have been ordered to investigate reports that unidentified vessels have been molesting Japanese fishing boats off South Korea's Cheju Island.

The officer, Brig. Gen. E. K. Wright, said the order was issued yesterday.

Meanwhile, Japan's transportation minister, Shinzo Oya, reported that the Koreans seized four more Japanese fishing boats Wednesday and yesterday. He said 66 Japanese crewmen from five boats seized off Cheju island Jan. 9 through the 12th have returned to Japan from Korea without their vessels.

Witnesses Fail To Agree On Girl's Calmness

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 27—Prosecution witnesses agree today that Carol Ann Paught's cancer-doomed father was in "terrible agony" before she shot him.

But the seven witnesses who have appeared before a jury of parents in the Bridgeport "mercy killing" trial disagreed on whether the statuesque 21-year-old blonde was "cool and collected," or "strange" when she killed him.

Nurse's Aide Rose Telesco, asserted the girl had a "strange, vacant expression" when she heard her father, Sgt. Carl W. Paught, 52, pleading for something to stop his agonizing pain. Five other witnesses said she was "cool" and "calm."

Stamford Police Sergeant John J. McInerney, who questioned her immediately after the shooting in Stamford hospital Sept. 25, said she admitted firing a "practice" shot so she would "know what I was doing."

Farms Put Less Grain To Loan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—The Agriculture Department reports that farmers put more than 534 million bushels of 1949 grain and oilseed crops under government loans and in purchase agreements.

That marked an eight million bushel drop from a similar period of 1948 when 542 million bushels were under the support program.

As of Dec. 31 there were under loans and agreements 313 million bushels of wheat, 104 million bushels of corn, 40 million bushels of grain sorghums, 31 million bushels of oats, and 28 million bushels of barley plus smaller quantities of rye, flaxseed and soybeans.

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

Next time you meet a fellow who doesn't believe in anything he can't measure with a slide rule, ask him to give you a logical explanation of the documented case history of Patience Worth.

On a July evening in 1913, two St. Louis housewives, a Mrs. John Curran and a Mrs. Emily Hutchings, were amusing themselves with an ouija board—a parlor pastime as popular then as Canasta is now. Suddenly Mrs. Curran felt a strong pressure on her hands and the pointer began to spell out a message: "Many moons ago I lived. Again I come. Patience Worth my name."

When the skeptical housewife asked to know more about the lady at the other end of the line, the board immediately answered that Patience Worth had been born in Dorsetshire, England, in 1694, and had always wanted to be a writer.

So began the strangest literary collaboration in the history of psychic phenomena, and during the next 15 years, with Mrs. Curran acting as medium, Patience Worth turned out four full-length novels and almost 2,500 poems—3,000,000 words in all.

The first novel, "A Sorry Tale," was published by the reputable and unsensationally-minded firm of Henry Holt and Co., and when The New York Times reviewed it on July 8, 1917, it said:

"This long and intricate tale of Jewish and Roman life during the time of Christ is constructed with the precision and accuracy of a master hand. It is a wonderful, a beautiful and a noble book."

THE SECOND NOVEL, "Hope Trueblood," was the story of a peasant girl in 17th Century England, and it was extolled by a London reviewer as "a landmark of fiction." And in "Braithwaite's Anthology of Poetry for 1917," there were three poems by Vachel Lindsay, three by Amy Lowell, one by Edgar Lee Masters, and five by Patience Worth.

The easy explanation for this phenomenon, of course, is that the St. Louis housewife was a talented writer who had invented the story of Patience Worth to get herself a little publicity. But before you make up your mind, consider the following:

At the beginning, Mrs. Curran got her messages via the ouija board a letter at a time, but halfway through the first book, she began to "see" whole words and sentences, and from then on she dictated to her husband at the rate of 110 words per minute. And hardly a dozen of the 3,000,000 words were of a vintage later than the 17th Century.

A great deal of her writing was done in the presence of reliable witnesses and investigators, and etymologists who examined her prose and poetry testified that it was impossible, without years of study and training, for a person to compose as much as a short story in 17th Century English.

Moreover, they unanimously agreed that the middle-class housewife who had never gone to high school and never been out of Missouri was the last person in St. Louis to write a 70,000-word narrative in iambic blank verse in 70 hours.

Many other oddish facts about this medium confused the psychologists and non-believers who came to investigate. Mrs. Curran often worked on three or four stories simultaneously, and would skip from one to the other in the course of a sitting without losing track of the narratives. And once, when her husband mislaid an early chapter of "A Sorry Tale," Patience Worth obligingly dictated it all over again.

IN ST. LOUIS in 1920, before an audience of writers, scientists and civic leaders at the Artists' Guild, Patience Worth was asked through Mrs. Curran to make up a 25-line poem, each line beginning with a different letter of the alphabet—which she did without faltering, going from "a" to "z" and leaving out the letter "x" as per instruction.

Who was Patience Worth? Well, various researchers went into this carefully and reported that a girl by that name was born in 1694 in Dorsetshire County, England; that some 30 years later she migrated to America, and was killed during an Indian attack in King Philip's War. And that many of the architectural landmarks referred to in her novels are still standing in Dorsetshire, and local records indicate that others had existed around 1694.

Patience Worth stopped communicating with Mrs. Curran in 1928, and Mrs. Curran died nine years later, but to this day nobody has been able to successfully ridicule this greatest-of-all literary riddles. Many psychologists agree with Dr. Walter Franklin Prince of the Boston Society for Psychic Research who, after spending considerable time on the case, said, "Either our concept of what we call the subconscious must be radically altered so as to include potencies of which we hitherto have had no knowledge, or else come cause operating through, but not originating in, the subconscious of Mrs. Curran must be acknowledged."

GLAMOROUS DAYS

THERE is, or was, magic in the name of Day. For a number of years almost anyone of that name could be easily elected to office in a statewide race in Ohio, and even more certainly in a local contest in Cleveland. There were nearly always several judges named Day on the Cleveland bench. The extreme example of the popularity of this name was seen a few years ago when the friends of a telephone lineman named Frank S. Day told him, "With a name like that you ought to be in politics." (Not only was the name Day popular, but another Frank S. Day was already serving on the common pleas court.) The lineman adopted the suggestion, ran for the state senate and served several terms there, incidentally without showing much greater qualification for the post than his name.

The drawing power of this name goes back to William R. Day, President McKinley's secretary of state and for twenty years justice of the United States Supreme Court. He was an Ohio man, whose appeal was naturally strongest to Ohioans. It extended outside the state, however, as shown by the career of his son, Stephen A. Day of Illinois, who has just died. He found the name helpful in twice getting elected to Congress, though he was defeated on his third try in 1944.

Will there be other Days in politics? Rufus S. Day, Jr., a nephew of William R. Day, has just been chosen to head a policy-forming group of Cleveland Republicans. This could be the beginning of a striking political career.

DEFYING STALIN

IT WAS foreshadowed, and now it has come. Stalin has formally been declared a god. This was not by the Russians, it is true, though that may come at any time, but by the subservient Albanian People's Assembly. The report transmitted by the Albanian Telegraph Agency is that the Assembly has voted to erect a statue of "the deity, Joseph Vissarionovich Stalin."

Doubtless Albania's precarious situation has much to do with this extreme of sycophancy. Threatened by Yugoslavia and Greece, and handicapped by a feeble government which can barely maintain internal order, Albania can look for aid only to fellow-Communist Russia. Hence there is this type hyper-adulation, which portrays Stalin as not human but divine.

Stalin, of course, has invited such outbursts. This taste for flattery, no matter how excessive, is at curious variance with the commonly accepted picture of him as a ruthless tyrant who has his feet firmly on the ground. Evidently Stalin has a weak spot in this relish for praise. A ruler of ordinarily good sense would have stopped this nonsense long ago.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The assumption is, in a country like ours, that anyone has a right to an opinion. The fallacy, of course, is that an opinion without facts is not an opinion at all; it might be gossip or hearsay or happy talk.

So, in all the discussion concerning the prospective wars, too many facts are missing to make an opinion worth its expression. For instance, such dates as 1952 or 1954 are offered. The premise for either date is based on the assumption that in some such year, Soviet Russia will be ready for the calculated risk of a conflict.

One of the factors for these assumptions is that the Russians and their satellites produce about 23 million tons of steel; that the United States can produce 90 million tons and our allies about 30 million tons.

The ratio is important only if the war is of the type that involves huge quantities of steel. If, on the other hand, we approach a total revolution in warfare, steel may not be so crucial.

For instance, polar warfare, involving airplanes and atomic, hydrogen and other bombs, is premised on the risk that a swift knockout blow is possible. Such a knockout in the United States would involve Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Chicago and the Ohio Valley from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati. Such a blow would destroy our steel and automotive industries and would stop railroad movements.

As for steel, practically all that would be left would be comparatively small plants in Birmingham, Alabama and on the Pacific Coast. No automobile plants of any importance would continue to function. As for railroads, only the southern and western lines would be available for limited service.

There are those who ask: "What would we be doing in the meantime?" That is not a smart question, because in knockout warfare, there are no two chances: The one who gets the knockout in first, has destroyed his enemy's capacity to resist. In an integrated country such as ours, with industry highly centralized about large cities of dense population, dependent upon external food and water supply, a knockout blow is possible.

The question then arises whether polar war is possible. On that subject, I can have no opinion nor can many persons have one. It involves highly technical knowledge of technical subjects. Our Airforce technicians believe that polar warfare is not only possible but likely. The layman may live to know which expert was right, but it may also be too late by that time.

So, we must first decide whether we are in danger of a knockout and whether we must not act before we get such a blow. It would help if we did know precisely what Stalin and his associates are thinking. Then we could formulate a policy more competently.

FEWER HIGHWAY DEATHS

CHEERING and at the same time surprising news comes out of a meeting of President Truman's Highway Safety Conference. Delegates report that in the last three years a nationwide effort has reduced the rate of traffic deaths by 41 percent. This year's death rate, 7.1 for each 100,000 miles traveled, is said to be the lowest in motoring history. The lives saved by the reduction are estimated at 16,000.

On the other hand the total annual death toll reflects no such reduction. Obviously much remains to be done. Roads, cars and drivers all need improvement. Of these three the drivers are probably the most important, for they can make up for most of the defects in the other two.

New Drug Proves Helpful In Fighting Stubborn Infection

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

In the past, infections of the urinary tract, particularly with germs in the group known as bacillus coli, have proved difficult to control. But, fortunately, today, it would seem that we have a valuable weapon against such stubborn infections of the kidney and bladder in the new antibiotic, aureomycin. Where all other measures fail, aureomycin is frequently highly successful.

Often, these urinary tract infections are associated with long-standing infections of the prostate gland, or infections elsewhere in the body.

Focal Infections

While the aureomycin cannot be expected to eliminate these focal infections, it does seem to bring dramatic relief from the bladder symptoms, that is, painful or frequent emptying of the bladder. It has also been suggested that the aureomycin be given for a few days before and for a week after operation on the prostate gland, in order to control the bladder infection which frequently follows these operations.

The treatment was carried out on ten patients and good results were obtained in all of these.

Aureomycin is easily administered. It is taken by mouth. No upset stomach occurred as a result of the use of the drug as now made. In one patient, a skin rash developed which promptly disappeared when the treatment was stopped.

When treatment is discontinued, reinfection sometimes occurs, particularly if the original source of the infection has not been cleared up. In such cases, a second course of treatment may be necessary. It is possible that the continued use of the preparation in reduced dosages may keep such infections from recurring.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Mother: My daughter is nineteen years of age. She has lots of belching and pains in the stomach and vomiting. What would you suggest?

Answer: There are many possible causes for a condition of this type, such as disorders affecting the stomach, bowel, gallbladder, or liver.

A thorough study is needed, including X-rays of the stomach, bowel, and gallbladder. Until the cause is found, proper treatment could not be advised.

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

The Navy is getting interested in the Brinks bandits. They figure fellows who could lift a million dollars might know how to lift a battleship.

Don't think those bandits won't be caught. If the FBI doesn't have them all by the end of February, the Treasury will catch them by March 15.

Boston has taken the bandit wave very calmly but the Lowell and Cabots are traveling in pairs for the time being.

A few Union Club members have protested the robbery there. They still can't see how bandits would have the front entry to enter the club without having gone before the admissions committee with two sponsors.

One of the members said: "Obviously these men were not true Bostonians or they would know our rules."

We hear the Union League in New York is taking steps to prevent a similar occurrence. Until further notice, visitors unknown to the doorman must be accompanied by the board of Chase National Bank.

CHAPTER ONE

CELIA DUSTIN sat before the mirrored dressing table in an elaborate corner suite on the sixth floor of the Sunlux Hotel in Miami Beach. Subconsciously she counted the strokes as the silver-mounted brush swept through her long, flaxen hair... eight, nine, ten... then changed it to her left hand and began counting toward the required hundred strokes. Her sheer coral dressing gown fell away from her shoulders, revealing the light sun-tan on her smooth throat and chest. Long dark lashes were half closed over her blue eyes that shone with an inner delight, and her full red mouth was lifted at the corners in a smile.

Celia was scarcely aware of her reflection. Her head was tilted, and she listened to the muffled sounds in the bathroom where her husband was taking a bath. They had been married two years today, and she knew exactly the progress he was making by the sounds. He was turning on the cold water now, swearing softly and contentedly as he made it colder and colder. In a moment Mark Dustin would fling back the curtain and emerge from the shower, dripping and spluttering like a half-drowned bear.

An indefinable shiver of pure delight traversed Celia's slender body as she transferred the brush from left to right hand for another ten strokes. Marriage was the most wonderful thing in the world. Marriage with Mark, she amended hastily to herself. She had often wondered during the past two years whether it would have been quite the same with any other man. She didn't think so. Mark wasn't anything wonderful. She often told herself that in order to keep her feet firmly on the ground, but he was right for her. She was serenely certain that of all the people in the world she and Mark were meant for each other.

She completed the hundred strokes and laid the hair brush on the dressing table. All sound from the bathroom had ceased. Soon Mark would come out, with his black silk robe carelessly belted around his lean stomach, his strong sun-bronzed face glowing with health and happiness. He would come up behind her chair and lay his cheek against her lush hair and smile at her reflection in the mirror, tell her she was the most beautiful girl in the world.

She smiled happily and demanded, "You do love me, don't you?" With his lips against her ear, he whispered, "Why else do you think I married you? You are such a paragon in public," he added. He straightened up then, and patted her cheek.

tion in the mirror, tell her she was the most beautiful girl in the world.

She would blush, as she always did. His lips would nibble at the lobe of her ear and he'd whisper that she was his doll, his baby girl, and then the lovely Miami morning would be perfect indeed.

Sunlight came through the east window and touched her head and shoulders caressingly. From far below there came the faint sound of the surf and the laughing voices of early bathers. It was one of those perfect days in December when the season is just beginning.

Celia did not move a muscle when she heard her husband come padding into the bedroom in coral-colored sandals. She watched her reflection in the mirror and saw him come up behind her and stop there as she had known he would. His black hair was tousled and he looked ten years younger than the forty he had admitted to when they were married. An unruly curl on either side of the part stood up, adding an impish look that matched the gleam in his gray eyes.

He was wonderful, she thought again, knowing him to be even older than forty from stories he had told and hints he'd let drop about adventuring in far places before they met. He was the type who would never grow old, never lose the exuberance of youth.

Something of her love and wonder and pride in him must have showed in her eyes as they met his in the glass, for Mark laughed, his hands on her shoulders, and said, "You look like a little girl on Christmas morning who had suddenly decided to believe in Santa Claus after all."

"I feel like a little girl on Christmas morning, Mark." His fingers tightened and his head bent low until his cheek was against her hair. Her eyes still held his in the mirror and a tremor went over her as he kissed her.

He said, gently, "You're the most beautiful girl in the world."

She smiled happily and demanded, "You do love me, don't you?" With his lips against her ear, he whispered, "Why else do you think I married you? You are such a paragon in public," he added. He straightened up then, and patted her cheek.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WHEN you are up against a player whom you know as none too good in defensive play, you have an opportunity of a special kind if you make the most of it. At such times it will pay you to give him any chance you can to make a mistake which will be worth one or more tricks to you. In fact, it is worth while to study the hand specially in an effort to find some way whereby you can extend him an invitation to aid you.

hook, East then managed to get a clear top score anyway. South's spade K was won by the A, the diamond J was finessed, the K won, the club tops were scored, the club 7 ruffed, the diamond A furnished a spade discard and East was now ready to ask for South's help. Having counted the layout for four spades and three of each other suit, he threw South in with the spade J to the Q, which he knew South held as the touching honor to the opening lead.

South fell for the bait and returned what East hoped, a heart. It was the Q, which the A won. The heart 9 then was finessed, the K felled the Q, and the last two tricks were won by the heart 5 and the established club 9. A better player would not have led back the heart Q, dooming the combination to trickiness unless North had a trump honor. A spade was South's correct return. It would have been ruffed in dummy, but the heart holding would have been retained as a sure trick winner for South. That had played by South made this East the only declarer to take twelve tricks on the deal.

Battle Over Rent Control May Be Spectacular Fight | Extension of Draft Faces Rough Going in Congress

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—It's a tossup whether Congress will extend federal rent controls for another year and indications are that there will be a full-fledged battle on Capitol Hill over the question. President Truman strongly favors continuing the rent curbs after their expiration on June 30, but there is a lot of sentiment in Congress to let them die.

Even some strong administration supporters privately say that they see no need to extend rent ceilings and the problem of holding down rents should be left up to local governments—not Washington.

The argument advanced by opponents of the rent law is that curbs are not needed on a nationwide basis although they may be desired in some localities. Therefore, they say, it is up to local officials.

On the other hand, the administration does not believe that the demand for rent housing has been met sufficiently, and the problem should not be tossed into the lap of pressure-ridden local authorities.

The battle over rent controls may easily turn out to be the most spectacular fight of this session of Congress. In fact, some legislators say consideration of the question may tie up Congress and prolong its present session.

● TO DRAFT OR NOT TO DRAFT?—Rough weather is in store for President Truman's forthcoming request for a continuation of the draft. It took months of fierce oratory for the administration to get the draft reimposed for 1948.

Then, Congress continued Selective Service for a two-year period, but only after considerable whittling of the administration's bill. Now Defense Secretary Louis Johnson wants a three-year extension, something he appears certain to be refused.

So far, Senator Harry P. Cain (R), Washington, is the only national lawmaker to speak out for the draft. Cain, a World War II veteran, believes that since Congress sets the ceiling on the size of the armed forces, it ought to have the courage to see that the requirements are met by approving the draft.

However, Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R), Wisconsin, who also is a World War II veteran, takes a different view. McCarthy says that until the armed services are willing to accept voluntary enlistments for the same short period a draftee would serve, he will be against forced inductions.

The case for the peacetime draft, never a popular one, is expected to be far from easy to present in the politically-minded election-year Congress.

● LABOR OUTLOOK—The coal, automobile and electrical industries shape up as "likely trouble spots" on the labor-management front at the outset of the new year.

John L. Lewis still does not have a new coal contract, despite a seven-month battle. The United Mine Workers' chief can be expected to shoot the works early in 1950.

With coal consumption running high and supplies short, the government will be under pressure to step in with the Taft-Hartley law injunction weapon.

On the auto scene, Walter Reuther's CIO-United Automobile Workers will be seeking a $100-a-month pension agreement from General Motors like the union obtained from Ford.

In addition, the UAW is after a union shop from GM. That is an explosive issue which may cause trouble.

The electrical industry is the battleground of rival unions whose fight will come to a head next year—the old United Electrical Workers expelled from the CIO for left-wing tendencies and the newly-formed right-wing CIO-International Union of Electrical Workers.

Their fight for members and contracts may get to the strike stage shortly.

Hoover Report, Traffic Safety Aired In Parley Of Circleville BPW Club

Henry Reid Jr.
Is Speaker

Circleville Business and Professional Women's Club heard Henry Reid Jr., of the Junior Chamber of Commerce speak on the "Hoover Commission" at the meeting held Thursday night in the club rooms of Masonic Temple. After Reid explained the work of the commission, a round-table discussion followed.

Club members received invitations to attend Founders Day meeting in Logan Feb. 12 and regional meeting in Cincinnati Feb. 18-19. Judge Florence Allen is scheduled to be guest speaker at the Cincinnati meeting.

Feb. 7 is the date set for BPW hospital work. Members will meet in club rooms to fold gauze.

Mrs. George Barnes gave a paper written by Miss Elma Raines who was unable to attend the meeting. Miss Raines stressed the fact in her paper, "How to Promote Traffic Safety," that good drivers are trained, not born. "Traffic problems are everybody's problems," she stated.

1949 brought with it a total of 176 accidents in the vicinity of Circleville. Miss Raines deplored the fact that teenagers so often play when they are driving. She stated that Circleville double and triple parking near school houses at the noon hour is a great hazard to safety. She warned that passengers often distract drivers thereby causing traffic accidents.

Miss Raines stated that a state patrolman blames a large number of accidents on the fast rate of speed.

The BPW club is planning a guest night for the next meeting. Miss Anne Gordon, membership chairman, will be in charge of arrangements.

POLIO EDUCATION

A great deal of the unnecessary terror associated with polio has been eliminated by the comprehensive educational program of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Millions of words channeled to the American people through educational literature, the press and radio have helped the nation view polio in its proper perspective. This educational program is only one phase of the all-out battle being waged by the National Foundation against poliomyelitis. Assistance in this struggle is needed constantly. Do your bit by giving generously to the March of Dimes TODAY.

Folk and square dancing concluded the evening program. Refreshments were served. Next meeting is scheduled for Feb. 18 in Wayne Township school.

GREAT TRIBUTE IS PAID British Friendship Stays Despite Indian Republic

LONDON, Jan. 27—The amazing vitality of the British crown against the backdrop of a world in transition played a major and historic part when India ceased to be a dominion and was proclaimed civilization's newest republic.

For with no urging from Whitehall and without fear of reprisals if it was not done, the Republic of India decided to remain inside the British commonwealth of nations.

Few greater attributes could be paid to the dignity with which King George has fulfilled his high office while other monarchies have fallen into disrepute and his own political parties at home are engaged in the most bitter struggle in decades.

Prestige and a fear of aggressive Communism probably were responsible jointly for this unique decision.

DESPITE ITS recognition of Communist China, the British government is pledged with the United States to halt further Red advances in Asia.

The leaders of India, knowing that their country is separated from the Red tide only by the plateau of Tibet and the Himalaya Mountains—no bulwarks to propaganda or political infiltration—deemed it wise to stay within the orbit of imperial strength.

India, with its huge population and long coastline, must occupy a key position in any British strategy.

Had the Indian republic chosen to cut itself absolutely loose from all ties with the commonwealth, London's position with regard to its own survival would be far more critical.

Certainly the Indians had ev-

Protestant Group Set To Vote On FEPC Resolution

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27 — Representatives of some 25 million Protestants will vote today on whether they should ask House Speaker Rayburn for favorable action on the bill to create a fair employment practices commission.

A resolution seeking the action was recommended yesterday by the human rights seminar of the National Home Missions Congress, scheduled to conclude its four-day convention here today.

The resolution, as passed by the seminar, stated:

"Recognizing injustices and hardships suffered by segments of the population because of discrimination in employment practices, we recommend the Congress of the United States adopt the fair employment practices bill now in the House of Representatives."

An amendment tacked on the resolution calls for each member of the Home Missions Congress to write immediately to Speaker Rayburn urging his favorable action.

The congress also will study a plan for carrying religion into homes of low income workers who seldom go to church. The plan calls for training of a special corps of ministers and a drive to inform Protestant laymen of basic problems of low income groups.

Marriage Ban Ruling Working

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 27—If Kentucky's newly installed three-day waiting period on the issuance of marriage licenses was intended to cut down the number of weddings, it has proved successful.

According to a state survey on the effects of the waiting period, in effect since Jan. 1, the marriage license business has suffered a terrific slump.

According to the survey, marriages have been cut in half virtually throughout the state, not only near any state boundary where out-of-staters in the past had been prone to secure "quickie" ceremonies.

New Corn Hybrids Are Detailed

Thomas Says Borers To Stand No Chance

Corn borers will meet their match in four new, rugged hybrid corns available for 1950 planting in Ohio.

These four new hybrids, Ohio K62, Ohio W64, Ohio C54 and Ohio L41, were described by Merle Thomas, associate Pickaway County agent, as "out-standing in stalk and shank quality. Ear dropping because of shank breakage and broken stalks can be practically eliminated by growing these hybrids."

Harvesting losses caused by corn borer damage, stalk rot or weak shanks were less with these four hybrids than with any other hybrids of comparable maturity, he said.

All of these new hybrids were developed under the supervision of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station and U. S. Department of Agriculture, and the hybrids have been certified by the Ohio Seed Improvement Association, Thomas said.

Commenting on the corn borer damage experienced by Iowa farmers in 1949, Thomas said, "We hope Pickaway County farmers will never be required to pick up a fourth to a half of their crop because wind shakes the borer-damaged ears from the plants."

WITH THESE new hybrids, or some of the previously certified borer-resistant strains, he believed there should be no complaints about ear dropping even under severe borer infestation.

K62 and W64 are well adapted to the northern half of Ohio, he said, while C54 is suitable for both north and central Ohio. L41 is adapted as a full-season corn for the southern part of the state. In addition to being borer-resistant, K62, W64 and C54 are resistant to aphids and leaf blights, while L41 has only average resistance to leaf blight but is extremely resistant to aphid infestation.

Man Admits Assault Cases

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—Nine-teen-year-old Jeremiah Reed of Columbus today faces trial on 10 counts of assault and robbery.

Reed, caught in a police "decoy" trap Wednesday, was identified in a police lineup yesterday as the man who assaulted five Columbus women in the last month. He later admitted to police his participation in all five of the cases.

Detectives said he would be charged on five counts of un-armed robbery and five counts of assault. Reed was captured by police when he attempted to enter the automobile of the "decoy," Policewoman Jean Miller.

Fugitive Held In Auto Theft

CLEVELAND, Jan. 27—Charles P. Gopshes, 25-year-old fugitive from the Grafton prison farm, is being held here today on federal charges.

Gopshes, who was charged yesterday by the FBI with the interstate theft of a 1950 car from a Berea sales lot last month, was serving a 10-to-25-year term for armed robbery when he escaped.

According to Ray J. Abbaticchio Jr., special agent in charge of the FBI, Gopshes drove the stolen car to New Mexico.

Gospel Is for All Men, Saith the Lord

ALL NATIONS TO BE CONVERTED BY APOSTLES

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

BEFORE JESUS' Ascension, He told His apostles to "make disciples of all the nations." This was a new idea to the Jews, who had accepted the Gospel of Christ for their exclusive own. It took some time and several object lessons to convince them that the Gospel was for all men everywhere.

In the modern world, missionaries journey far over the whole earth to bring this message to the people of far-off lands. Millions thus hear the word of God and become Christians.

The lesson today is long and can only be touched upon here, so full is it of episodes and action. In the first place, we are told of Saul, a determined persecutor of the converts to this new religion.

Saul went to the high priest and asked for papers to the synagogues at Damascus, so that he would have authority to seize any Christians he might find there and bring them captive to Jerusalem.

On the way, however, he was confronted with a vision of Jesus, who asked: "Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" Trembling and astonished, Saul asked the Lord what he should do, and was told to go on to Damascus and there he would receive further orders.

The vision had blinded Saul, so that he had to be led by the hand into the city. For three days he remained blind, and he ate and drank nothing. Then Ananias, a man sent by God, came to him, expounded the Gospel to him, and he who had been the bitter, relentless enemy of the early church now became its fearless exponent.

In Samaria, Philip was preaching the Gospel, led by the Lord's command. There, in a desert country he saw an Ethiopian—a eunuch, a man of great authority in the service of Queen Candace of that country.

The eunuch was reading the Gospel, and Philip asked him if he knew whereof he read. The eunuch asked for instruction, and Philip expounded it to him, converting him.

We travel far abroad in the comparatively limited boundaries of the old world in this lesson. The scene now shifts to three Mediterranean cities—Lydda, Jop-

pa and Caesarea, and Peter is the central figure.

We are told of miracles he performed—first on Aeneas who, for years, had been confined to his bed with paralysis, and who was completely healed by Peter.

The other was the raising from the dead of Tabitha, or Dorcas, a good, devout, charitable woman for whom many mourned. She was restored to her household and friends.

However, Peter himself was also "converted" by a vision vouchsafed to him by God. Asleep on the roof of a house in which he was staying, Peter had a vision of a sheet being let down from heaven in which were all manner of beasts.

A voice told him to kill and eat, as he was hungry. Peter, being a Jew, protested that he could not eat that which was considered unclean by his people. The voice said, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common."

Peter could not guess the meaning of this vision, but he was called to answer a knocking on the door. Three men had been sent to him. They came from a Roman centurion (soldier) who was a good man and true, who revered Jehovah. He had seen a vision of an angel who told him to send for a man named Simon, whose surname was Peter, and he would instruct him.

Peter then knew what his vision must mean—that he was literally to follow the Master's instructions, to preach the Gospel "unto all men."

He accompanied the messenger to the home of the centurion Cornelius, and there, before the centurion's entire household, gathered to hear him, Peter said (possibly with a smile), "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth Him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with Him."

Peter told his listeners of Jesus, His life on earth, His message, and His death and resurrection. He converted and baptized the whole household of Cornelius.

The church members in Jerusalem were at first dubious about accepting non-Jews into their congregation, but when Peter told of his vision from God, they said no more.

to stand by for two hours and watch a $100,000 fire sweep through an icy pier last night.

The pier, adjoining a Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad bridge over the Maumee river, was 400 feet from the shore. It was used to protect the draw bridge and mechanism from ice formation and movement. The blaze was brought under control from a tugboat.

Federal Pork Support Delayed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27—The government has decided not to go into the pork business—at least not if things continue as at present.

Agriculture Department officials said the price of hogs on the seven major markets will average out .50 to $1 higher than supports this week.

The government announced last week that it would buy bacon, smoked ham and smoked picnic shoulders to bolster sagging hog prices.

Why Should a Dollar's Worth of Travel Continue to Cost You $1<sup>15</sup>?

IS THIS TRIP NECESSARY? you were asked in 1941, when every inch of space was needed for troops and war supplies. To discourage travel then, a tax was added on your travel dollar, a tax that grew to 15% during the war. The Federal Government collected it through the railroads. The Government still collects it, though your travel need not be rationed now.

Today, the original purpose of this tax is as obsolete as an Air Warden's helmet. But, four years after the war's end, YOU are still paying the Government at the rate of $250,000,000 a year in travel tax.

And, of the billion and three quarters collected since 1941, over half came out of your pocket after the green light on travel went on again.

You don't have food rationing today... you don't have gasoline rationing today.

Yet, a very real brake is still being put on travel. On a coach trip from New York to Chicago, for example, YOU are still paying $4.61 in Federal tax.

And the same with the goods that are shipped to your home community. On every dollar you pay for freight, you pay the Government an extra 3 cents (4¢ a ton on coal). That means YOU are still paying over $300,000,000 a year—freight tax alone.

This tax should be repealed NOW. There is no longer any reason you should pay $1.15 for every dollar's worth of travel... $1.03 for every dollar of railroad freight.

5 EVENTS TO BE WATCHED

Records Expected To Fall In Annual Millrose Event

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 — The veteran director of the Millrose Games said today that records may fall in up to five different events at the big indoor track carnival in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night—and the mile may be one of them.

Track-wise Fred Schmertz, boss of the Millrose, thinks that Gil Dodds' record mile mark of 4:05.3 can be assaulted either by Don Gehrman, the frail-looking Wisconsin runner, or Fred Wilt, the well-advertised FBI agent.

It is not so much the fact that both are capable of doing 4:05.3 (though they haven't done so yet) as it is, to Schmertz' way of thinking, the fact that tomorrow night's field for the Wana-maker Mile will be unusually may bring out super efforts on the part of Gehrman, Wilt, or both.

IT COULD BE, for that matter, that Ireland's scampering John Joe Barry will be going for it all; or Yale's George Wade, John Twomey of Illinois AC, or Tom Kirwas of Penn.

"A truly high-calibre field," Schmertz declares.

Looking further, the meet director thinks one of the hurdlers—Harrison Dillard, Craig Dixon, Bill Fleming or Jim Gehrdes—can tie or break the Millrose record of 7.2 seconds in the 60-yard high hurdles.

Andy Stanfield, dread operative from Seton Hall who holds the IC4A 60, 100 and 220 yard and National AAU 100 and 200 meter sprint titles, will be shooting at the Millrose and world indoor 60-yard mark of 6.1 seconds.

In the mile relay, NYU and Cornell both menace the local record of 3:19.8, and in the two-mile relay event Villanova has a crack foursome that could well eclipse the present 7:44 standard.

Nobody seriously expects Cornelius Warmerdam's pole vault record of 15-and-a-half-plus feet to fall, but funny things have been happening lately. Bob Smith, from San Diego State, has a new spun-glass-fibre pole that's supposed to work wonders, and Don Laz, of Illinois, will be on hand too. He cleared 15 feet last weekend—something nobody but Warmerdam had ever done before.

Local Juniors Make Up For Chillicothe Loss

Circleville junior high school basketballers Thursday made up for an early season loss by handing invading Chillicothe West Fifth youngsters a 23-17 defeat.

The win for the locals, however, came in the second half after the invaders dominated the first portion of the contest.

Chillicothe scored an 8-4 first period lead, pushing ahead again at the mid-mark to score a 12-10 advantage. The locals found the lead for the first time during the third quarter to post a 17-16 tally, while advancing to the final 23-17 score in the finale.

Don Skinner paced the local juniors to the win with a total of eight points.

Box score of the contest follows:

Chillicothe	C	F	T
Lee	1	0	2
Mason	1	0	2
Bates	2	3	7
Long	2	0	4
Strausbaugh	0	0	1

Junior High Cagers Await County Tourney

New Holland and Washington Township basketball teams will meet at 1 p. m. Saturday in Jackson Township school gym to open the 1950 Pickaway County junior tournament.

A complete first round will be played Saturday. Second round play will be held Monday, with semi-finals slated for Wednesday and the finals carded for Feb. 1.

Remainder of the first round schedule is: South Bloomfield vs. Ashville at 2 p. m.; Salt Creek vs. Walnut at 3 p. m.; Wayne Township vs. Deer Creek at 4 p. m.; Darby vs. Mühlenberg at 7 p. m.; Pickaway vs. Jackson at 8 p. m.; and Scioto vs. Atlanta at 9 p. m.

Monroe, which drew a bye for the first round of play, will meet the winner of the New Holland-Washington game at 6 p. m. Monday to open the second round.

Nearly 600 seats will be available for junior tournament, according to Jackson officials, while as many as 1,000 may crowd in to watch the matches to fill up standing room.

Baseball Rule Changes Ready

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27 — President George M. Trautman of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues announced today the first publication of baseball rules in their revised and reclassified form.

He also announced that to bring about complete understanding of the rules he tentatively has planned seven rule interpretation clinics the first week in April for league presidents, umpires, managers and club personnel.

Tris Speaker To Aid Clinic

CLEVELAND, Jan. 27 — Tris Speaker, one of baseball's all-time greats, will be one of the speakers at the coaching clinic conducted by the Cleveland Indians Saturday for high school and college coaches and sandlot and semipro managers.

Others scheduled to talk at the clinic are Coaches Muddy Ruel and Mel Harder, Outfielder Bob Kennedy and Former Tribesman J. Vosmik.

Demaret Stroke Ahead Of Hogan In Hogan Open

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 27 — Golf's Beau Brummel, Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Cal., led the pack into the second round of the $10,000 Ben Hogan Open today, but the man in whose honor the tournament was named was right on his heels.

Only a stroke separated Demaret and Hogan and just another stroke back was the tournament favorite, Slammin' Sammy Snead.

With the aid of a hole-in-one, Demaret chalked up a seven-under-par 64 during his first round on the sun-baked, 6,600-yard Phoenix Country Club course yesterday. His card tied the course record.

Hogan, the sentimental favorite of everyone, dropped a 30-foot putt on the 18th green for a birdie three that gave him a day's total of 32-33-65.

Tied with Hogan with an identical card of 32-33-65 was John Palmer of Badin, N. C.

SNEAD, who fared badly in the recent Long Beach Open, demonstrated that he had found the range again when he came up with a threatening 32-34-66.

Bracketed with Snead was Wally Ulrich of Minneapolis with a 36-30-66.

Others with scores that kept them well in the running included Jack Harden of El Paso and Dale Anderson of Hinsdale, Ill., with 67s, and Ellsworth Vines of Chicago, Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., and Fred Hawkins of El Paso with 68s.

Only 3 Class A Teams Remain Unbeaten Here

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27 — Three teams still remain undefeated today in Ohio Class A high school basketball. By tomorrow the triumvirate probably will be cut down to two.

Grandview's hustling Bobcats likely will be among the missing. The Bobcats, winners of 11 straight, run into Mansfield's towering Tygers tonight in Mansfield and are almost certain to find the going a little too tough.

Most of Grandview's victories have been chalked up among Ohio's lesser clubs. Mansfield, on the other hand, has met and conquered some of the best teams in the state, notable among them Ashland and Akron South.

The once-beaten Tygers fell, 59-52, before Springfield, but that was considered by most as a stunning upset.

Other games tonight find Circleville at Wilmington, Delphos St. John's at Ottawa Hills, Lima Central at Middletown, Akron St. Vincent's at Akron St. Marys, Norton at Springfield Township, Lancaster at Coshocton, Akron East at Akron South and Canton McKinley at Akron Kenmore.

On tap tomorrow are the Middletown-Lima South, Columbus West-Marion Harding, Columbus North-Ashland and Defiance-Hamilton frays.

IT SURE IS, for the jockeys are admiring Rube Marquard, once one of baseball's great pitchers, and the Rube, a clerk in the mutual department at Tropical Park, Coral Gables, Fla., has plenty of admiration for the little guys. The jockeys are (from left) George Stidham, Mike Danisi, Pewee Shaw, Jimmy Purser and Sam Boulemetis. Florida racing shifts to Hialeah Jan. 17. (International)

OSU CAGE STAR SLIPPING? Experts Fear Schnittker May Be Burning Self Out

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27 — Is Ohio State's Dick Schnittker burning himself out on the nation's basketball courts?

The six-foot, five-inch All-America forward and his coach, little Tippy Dye, may maintain Big Dick is OK, but the feeling is growing among Columbus newsmen that Schnittker is a very tired boy.

You wouldn't know from the giant cage ace's performances to date, for he's been going better than ever this year. However, the question seems to be, "how long can he keep it up?"

Schnittker's feats as a football star last fall after two years' non-participation in the grid sport are almost legendary now on the Ohio State campus.

Whether the long grind of the regular football season plus extended drills for the Bucks' Rose Bowl appearance have taken their toll of the Sandusky youth remains to be seen.

Schnittker started off like a house afire for the 1949-50 Buck cagers. With only a few days practice he dropped in 22 points in Ohio's opening game against DePaul.

AGAINST Marquette in the Bucks' second test, he hit for 33 markers, a new Ohio State record.

As a matter of fact, he has been Ohio's leading scorer in each of the nine games he has participated in so far this season.

And in those nine games, he totalled 202 points for a 21.3 per-game average, one of the best in the nation.

Should Schnittker keep going, he might still surpass the Big Ten scoring mark of 22.3 points per game hung up by Iowa's Murray Weir during the 1947-48 season.

Furthermore, every time he sinks a field goal or a foul shot he rewrites the Ohio State record book. His three-year total so far already has reached 860 points, close to 200 more than that compiled by any other cager in Buck history.

But the Buckeye sharpshooter, probably the hardest worker on the current squad, appears to have slowed down considerably in Ohio's last few tests.

Saturday against Illinois he was held to 16 points, his lowest output of the season. Monday against Iowa he dropped in 21, but needed rest frequently.

According to those familiar with Schnittker's previous performances, he now appears tense, taut—whereas in the past he usually was the most relaxed man on the court.

With Ohio State currently on top in the Big Ten scramble and eight conference frays still to be played, Schnittker can't afford to take it easy.

As he goes, so go Ohio State's basketball fortunes.

Big Spring Pig Losses Feared

Ag Agent Gives Tips On Disease

Animal Health Said Necessary

Disease is expected to take a heavy toll of next Spring's baby pig crop—probably one out of every four pigs farrowed throughout the nation.

That was the warning given Pickaway County farmers Friday by Larry Best, county agricultural extension agent.

Best, now taking a special instruction course in Ohio State university on hog care, said the prediction was based on a statement made by the American Foundation for Animal Health.

The worst part of this alarming situation, the county agent said, is that most of the losses will be unnecessary.

HE GAVE a checklist stressing five points to help swine producers avoid heavy death losses:

"1. Balanced feeding of the sow during gestation. A good ration should include necessary minerals, iodine (to prevent farrowing of dead, hairless pigs), and Vitamins A and D. Mixing a small amount of irradiated yeast with the ration will help supply plenty of Vitamin D, while high-grade, green alfalfa hay will meet the Vitamin A requirements.

"2. Maintaining clean farrowing pens and transportation of sow and litter to clean ground to avoid parasites and disease germs.

"3. Keeping quarters warm, dry and well ventilated, and installing guard rails to avoid crushing of pigs.

"4. Feeding the sow few solids during the first 36 hours after farrowing, then slowly returning her to a regular ration.

"5. Keeping a sharp lookout for sickly pigs and getting a prompt diagnosis of the trouble before disease can spread to the entire pig crop."

Unemployment Claims Nearly Double 1948

Claims for unemployment compensation in Pickaway County during the last month in 1949 were almost double the number filed in the same period of 1948.

During the month a total of 131 new claims were filed, and 1,259 continued claims. December records for 1948 reveal that only 73 new claims were filed, and 624 continued claims.

According to Mary Wolf, clerk, the December total of new claims was lower than the 178 filed in November. Continued claims, however, showed a jump upward, with 1,115 filed in November.

Miss Wolf said a total of 2,278 visits were made to the local office in December. The previous month's total was 2,059. New applications for employment reached 75 in December, less than the 84 recorded in November.

She said the office made five industrial placements in December. The month before 24 were made. Ten employer visits were made in December by C. C. Thomas, local BUC manager.

Block Of Dimes To Be Sought For Polio Fund

A "block-of-dimes" campaign will be held in Circleville streets Saturday by the American Legion drum and bugle corps to aid in the local March of Dimes drive.

The "block-of-dimes" program will begin at about noon Saturday and will continue throughout the afternoon and into the evening.

According to final plans laid Thursday by the corps, the "block-of-dimes" drive will be held at the Murphy store at Court and Main streets and continue west along Main street to the first alley.

A tape will be laid along the route of the dimes so that the donors will be able to see the line of dimes outlined against a black background. The proposal is that a continuous string of ten-cent pieces be laid side-by-side along the route to reach the alleyway and back to the starting point.

Members of the bugle corps will be on hand during the operation to place the dimes and to recruit donors. A public address system is to be used to explain the program. The drive is slated to end at about 8 p. m.

Country Home Lost In Fire

COLUMBUS, Jan. 27—A suburban Columbus family of 10 was forced to flee to safety through freezing temperatures last night when fire destroyed their $4000 two-story frame residence.

The fire occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Angus, two and a half miles east of Canal Winchester.

Mrs. Violet Angus, 30, told deputies she discovered flames coming from the roof of the home when she took two of her six children to their second floor bedroom. She alerted the rest of the household.

Looking Ahead

A great labor organization got down to earth the other day with some real thinking on a resolution for the new year. A story from Washington dated Dec. 26 said:

"The American Federation of Labor today proposed that management and labor get together in 1950 to cut production costs and that labor get a wage increase as its share of the result in saving."

That's talking real turkey!

Labor is right in suggesting that employees deserve a share of what is saved when production costs are reduced. I believe that workers ought to have higher wages, when they can produce more goods without increasing costs in other ways. Actually, there is no sound way to increase wages—except greater productivity. Our production per man day has jumped 500 percent during the past 100 years. That explains today's good wages.

THROUGHOUT the industrial history of America, most industries have paid about all they could afford to pay in wages. There have been some exceptions. But in general, as productivity increased wages climbed higher. Because of modern methods and good tools, productivity per man day has doubled during the last 33 years. The reward for great output and efficiency has been a very high level of wages.

But what's been happening lately? In the past five years wages have been pushed upward by artificial means. Heavy pressure from both unions and government has shoved them upward faster than productivity has increased.

Naturally, these methods create dislocations and encourage inflation. I believe we have reached the point where any further steps in that direction would bring unemployment and encourage depression.

Now, this AF of L plea that labor join with management to bring down production costs for the purpose of obtaining higher wages is a real ray of hope. It makes exceeding good sense. For example, I am told that in the housing industry the cost of laying brick could be brought way down, with the right kind of cooperation of employees and management. Here is a condition that has hurt construction progress and slowed the building of homes throughout the nation.

I UNDERSTAND that a good bricklayer can lay 800 to 1,200 bricks a day without much difficulty. However, a good many builders have told me that the union will allow their bricklayers to put up only 350 to 400 per day. If this industry represents a fair example of what could be done with full cooperation of labor and management, surely there are great strides to be made in the years ahead toward achieving higher living standards for the people of America.

Experts tell us that America's living standards have advanced in direct proportion to productivity per man day.

This simply means that increased production will bring about increases in living standards. My conviction is that good labor-management co-operation could increase productivity per man day another 100 percent within the next 33 years. This would bring a 100 percent increase in living standards.

This miracle will happen again, only if labor and management pull together. If they solve our industrial problems in an intelligent way America will reach higher and higher levels of output. Not only will this cooperation insure plenty of jobs and the goods we need. It will do much to reverse the trend toward statism, which threatens to reduce every American's standard of living to the same low level.
